Azana Accepts Doctor as Premier; Most of Blocs Reconciled.

Anarchist Union Loses Four Seats

Portfolios Reduced to 9; Mola Tightens Ring Around Bilbao.

By the Associated Press.

Valencia, Spain, May 17.—Dr. Juan Negrin formed a new "win the war" Spanish government tonight.

Negrin, a 48-year-old physician and a Socialist, heads Spain's sixth wartime government as premier. Negrin also will serve as minister of finance.

The number of seats in the new cabinet was reduced from 19 to 9. All ministers represent the Popular Front political parties. The C. N. T. trades union, which had four posts in the old cabinet, was left out after refusal to participate.

The new cabinet setup: Foreign affairs, Jose Giral, Left Republican; national defense, Indalecio Prieto, Socialist; justice, Manuel Irujo, Basque Nationalist; interior, Julian Zuga Zagoita, Socialist; instruction and health, Jesus Hernandez, Communist; agriculture, Vincent Uribe, Communist; public works and communications, Bernardo Giner de los Rios, Union Republican, and labor and social assistance, Jaime Ayguade, Catalan Left Republican.

Negrin submitted the new cabinet list to President Manuel Azana. It was accepted at once.

Ministries Merged.

The new cabinet groups the ministries of war, navy and air into a single unit in line with demands from Communists and other factions as a means of co-ordinating all armed power of the Spanish government for a "big push" to victory over insurgents.

Negrin also announced the ministry of propaganda had been merged with the ministry of state, and that of industry with finance.

President Azana asked Negrin to form a new government when Francisco Largo Caballero, veteran leader of Spanish Socialism, gave up the task of reorganizing his ministry. Largo Caballero's government resigned Saturday.

Negrin, who was Largo Caballero's treasury minister, declared he would seek the support of all parties opposed to the Fascist insurgents. His predecessor had been unable to gain that support.

The Communists opposed the retiring premier's demand that he retain both the premiership and the war portfolio as an effective means of combatting Generalissimo Francisco Franco and his men.

The Socialists would not go on in a government which did not have Communist backing; the Left Republicans supported the Communist demand for a stronger war policy and separation of the premiership and war ministry, and the Anarchists assailed Largo Caballero for wishing to reduce the number of Anarchist seats in the cabinet from four to two.

Mola Reports More Gains.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Border, May 17 (AP).—Spanish insurgents tonight drove hard upon Bilbao's last triple line of trenches, which lie only 6 miles from the center of the long-besieged Basque capital.

Gen. Emilio Mola's insurgent troops swept across Biscargi Hill, an insurgent announcement said, 2 to 3 miles from the semicircle of government lines which start at the Bay of Biscay and run around Bilbao, ending at a point on the bay some 12 miles west of the start.

Already the besieging insurgents held positions in the Mount Sollube region, north of Biscargi Hill. Today's push, which spread over a 10-mile front, tended to straighten out the line east of the refugee-packed Basque City.

Reports Mola's forces were to get additional help by the landing of a new body of insurgents west of Bilbao found no confirmation. Insurgent transports, guarded by warships, had been reported between Bilbao and Santander.

Leftists Plan Catalan Drive.

Bilbao, May 17 (AP).—The general staff of the Spanish government's eastern army drew up plans tonight for a quick offensive on the Catalan front in an effort to divert insurgent pressure from Bilbao.

Mutiny of Italians Reported in Paris

Paris (Tuesday), May 18 (U.P.).—The Leftist newspaper, L'Oeuvre, said today 200 Italian soldiers were shot in Italy when an entire regiment mutinied and refused to embark for Spain.

The newspaper asserted violent demonstrations were breaking out throughout Italy against continuation of intervention in Spain. A corps of engineers at Castel-Maggiore refused to leave for Spain, L'Oeuvre said.

Two hundred persons were arrested at Genoa, it said, after posters were found on walls reading "Down With Fascism," "Long Live Republican Spain" and "Down With Mussolini."

The newspaper asserted that when electricity was cut off in Milan for 25 minutes two weeks ago, walls were found covered with thousands of posters denouncing intervention and proclaiming: "The hour of liberty for oppressed Italy will soon be sounded."

Mother Says She Held Girl While Lover Slew Her With Ax

Mrs. Helen Tiernan, blonde seamstress, who confessed, according to New York police, that she killed her 8-year-old daughter, Helen, and attempted to slay her 5-year-old son, James, because the apartment in which they lived was too small to accommodate them and a man with whom she was infatuated.

Confesses Killing Daughter, 8, Slashing Brother, 5, Because Apartment Was Too Small for All of Them; Man Denies Charge.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 17.—Detective Capt. Edward Mullins, in charge of the Manhattan homicide squad, said tonight Mrs. Helen Tiernan had implicated her lover, George Christie, in the killing of her daughter Helen and the wounding of her son Jimmy in a thicket on Long Island Saturday morning.

This announcement was made at police headquarters after Mrs. Tiernan had been questioned for ten hours.

Christie, who had been held as a material witness and questioned along with the woman, who is charged with homicide, denied the charges.

The detective captain said Mrs. Tiernan told him she held the girl while Christie hit the child with a hatchet.

Mullins said Mrs. Tiernan, who earlier had confessed she alone killed her 8-year-old daughter and tried to kill her 5-year-old son because their living quarters were too crowded, changed her story tonight after he told her she was not believed.

The later story, as the detective said Mrs. Tierman told it to him was this:

She and Christie were engaged and he had given her a ring, but no date had been set for their marriage. Recently when she had asked when they were to be married he

New Witnesses Questioned in Jordon Inquiry

Final Findings of U. S. Will Be Sent to Roosevelt.

Roger Robb, young Assistant United States Attorney, who prosecuted Thomas Jordon, 31, now facing death in the electric chair, has been interviewing eyewitnesses and others who might be able to throw light on the case but who did not testify at the condemned man's trial, The Post learned last night.

The statements Robb has obtained he has turned over to Thomas Lyons, pardon attorney for the Department of Justice, whose investigation led to an order by President Roosevelt postponing Jordon's execution from May 14 to June 14.

Statements Vary.

Robb began calling in eyewitnesses and others last week. Some of their statements were favorable to Jordon, others unfavorable. All are being turned over to Pardon Attorney Lyons.

Lyons soon will report his findings to Attorney General Homer Cummings, and the latter will turn them over to President Roosevelt, who apparently is Jordon's last hope in his fight to escape the electric chair.

Among those Robb interviewed last week were F. C. Schneider, an electrical dealer, who lives at 1353 Iris street northwest, and Carlton R. Long, of 1348 Iris street. These two, with their wives, were having a late "snack" at the Garden T-Shoppe on Good Friday night in 1931, when two bandits held up the

Plan Studied To Eliminate Unfit Drivers

D.C. Motorists in Accidents Would Be Required to Prove Ability.

Weeding out of incompetent automobile drivers by thorough questioning of all operators involved in accidents is being considered by William A. Van Duzer, director of traffic, it was learned yesterday.

Other traffic developments of the day were:

The death at Emergency Hospital of William Hannan, 60, of 1521 Seventeenth street northwest, from a skull fracture suffered Saturday when he was struck by an automobile. His death brought the year's traffic toll to 48, 14 above last year at this time.

Action of a coroner's jury ordering Arthur G. Boan, 30, of 4002 D street southeast, held for Police Court action under the negligent homicide act in the death of Elmer Lee Barham, 39, of 102 Ridge street southeast, who died from a broken neck when he fell from Boan's car.

Exoneration by the coroner's jury of Isaac C. Burnett, of 1603 D street southeast, a street car motorman, of blame in the death of George L. Martin, 78, of the Ontario Apartments, who was injured May 7 when he was struck by a street car which jumped the track.

Court Rules Chain Store Taxes Legal

Louisiana Law Upheld, 4-3; Rush of Similar State Acts Seen.

Supreme Bench Denies U. S. Return of AAA Processing Levy.

By Franklyn Waltman.

In a decision which may have a wide-spread and far-reaching economic effect, the Supreme Court yesterday upheld the constitutionality of a Louisiana State tax on chain stores, graduated upward on the basis of the number of units in the chain irrespective of where they are located.

Dividing four to three—with two justices taking no part—the court held that the Legislature of Louisiana—and of any other State—had the authority to tax chain stores on the basis of the size of the chain to which they belonged as a means of mitigating the evils of competition.

The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., operators of 15,082 grocery stores and one of the national chains which assailed the validity of the Louisiana law, told the court in its brief that if the act were upheld "the era of the national chain is over." The brief added that "it may perhaps also be said that the era of national corporations and of firms and individuals doing business in more than one State is over."

Other States May Follow.

The A. & P. lawyers argued that upholding the Louisiana law, which subjects each store their clients have in that State to an annual tax of $550, would "open the door to the application of a similar theory to franchise, income and other taxes." Those familiar with the fight against chain stores going on throughout the country now expect that the Louisiana law will be copied by other States.

Justice Owen J. Roberts, speaking for the court, confined his remarks to the case at hand and contented himself with laying down the rule that in graduating a chain-store tax, State legislatures are at liberty to take into account the number of stores in the chain outside of the State as well as within.

This view was sharply contested in a minority opinion written by Justice George Sutherland and joined in by Justices James C. McReynolds and Pierce Butler. They held that such a method of taxation was a denial of "the equal protection of the laws and an attempted exertion of the legislative power of the State with respect to properties and business located beyond its territorial borders."

Van Devanter, Stone Inactive.

Joining in the Roberts opinion were Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes and Justices Louis D. Brandeis and Benjamin N. Cardozo. For reasons which were not revealed, Justices Willis Van Devanter and Harlan F. Stone took no part in the case.

The decision upholding the Louisiana chain store tax was the most important of the nine decisions handed down yesterday by the tribunal. Its decision on the constitutionality of the Social Security taxes was witheld until next Monday, or perhaps May 31, the last two opinion days of this term of court.

Second in importance only to the Louisiana tax case was the court's 8-to-1 decision upholding the validity of the New Deal act which bars refunds of AAA processing taxes, except where the taxpayer demonstrates that the levy was not passed on to consumers or deducted from the price of raw materials.

$963,000,000 Saved.

Had the court struck down this legislation the Treasury would have been liable for the return of approximately $963,000,000 collected under the AAA processing taxes before they were declared illegal. As a result of the decision the Treasury is under an obligation to refund only those sums in processing taxes where it is shown the processor actually made the payment without reimbursement.

In another decision the Supreme

By Sidney Olson.

Fifteen Democratic Senators agreed last night to a last-ditch fight against the President's court reorganization bill. Fourteen of the 15 declared themselves irrevocably against any compromise proposals whatsever. The decisions were made at a two-hour caucus.

The fifteenth, Senator Carl A. Hatch, of New Mexico, decided to stand against the addition of six justices to the Supreme Court, but held out firmly for his own compromise proposal, which would add not more than one justice to the Supreme bench per calendar year, with the court to revert to nine as justices over an age-limit of 75 retired.

Among the 14 others was Senator Pat McCarran, of Nevada, hitherto a leading advocate of compromise, and a key member of the Senate Judiciary committee, which will vote today on the bill. McCarran said he would withdraw his compromise proposal, which would add two justices to the Supreme Court, and vote against any compromise proposals.

41 Now Oppose Plan.

Also present were Senators Francis T. Maloney, of Connecticut; William J. Bulow, of South Dakota, and A. Harry Moore, of New Jersey. These three, while previously recorded in Washington Post polls as against the bill, had not publicly declared themselves against it, and their action in attending the session yesterday was the first confirmation of their position. This number, added to 38 Senators previously declared publicly against the court plan, made 41 Senators on record in opposition to the President.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, in whose offices the meeting was held, acted as spokesman for the group. He said:

"We're all taking the President at his word. He said, 'No compromise.' Chairman Henry Ashurst of the Judiciary Committee has also said, 'No compromise.'

"We're taking them and Jim Farley at their word. We will not accept any compromise. We will vote against any and all amendments and against the bill."

Sees 10-8 Committee Vote.

"All of the Senators but Senator Hatch said they would not vote for any amendment. The Judiciary Committee will vote against the bill tomorrow, and will bring out an unfavorable report later. The vote will be 10 to 8 against in committee, and may rise to 12 to 6.

"We have at least 50 Senators ready to vote against six justices, and may get more."

Another Senator said privately: "Both Senator McCarran and Senator O'Mahoney were deeply wounded by the insult given them by Postmaster General Farley the other day. They have stiffened their opposition, and will drop their compromise proposals in order to insure the defeat of any court-packing scheme of any kind."

15 Senators Listed.

The 15 Senators present at the meeting were:

Wheeler, Montana; Harry F. Byrd, Virginia; Bulow, South Dakota; Tom Connally, Texas; William H. King, Utah; Bennett C. Clark, Missouri; Josiah W. Bailey, North Carolina; O'Mahoney, Wyoming; Maloney, Connecticut; Hatch, New Mexico; Millard W. Tydings, Maryland; McCarran, Nevada; Moore, New Jersey; Vic Donahey, Ohio, and Guy M. Gillette, Iowa.

Reporters, tipped off that there was to be a secret meeting of the opposition leaders, hunted without success for the caucus until one recalled Senator Wheeler had been seen during the Senate session going from Senator to Senator in whispered conference.

Held in Wheeler's Office.

Wheeler's office knew nothing of the meeting, however, and neither did the secretaries of any of the other Senators, so the hunt was fruitless until two newsmen spied a group of known court-bill oppon-

Nebraska Plans To Buy 4 Huge Power Projects

Omaha Paper Reports Deal; Senate Votes Inquiry of Utilities.

By the Associated Press.

Omaha, Nebr., May 17.—The World-Herald said today it had learned Nebraska's three Public Works Administration financed hydro-electric projects were negotiating for the purchase of four big private power companies with the intention of combining them into a public power system.

The paper said the public districts, under the plan, would issue revenue bonds totaling between $75,000,000 and $100,000,000 to finance the purchase of the Nebraska Power Co. of Omaha, the Iowa-Nebraska Light & Power Co. of Lincoln, the Western Public Service Co. of North Platte and Scotts Bluff, and the Central Power Co. of Grand Island and Nebraska City.

The public power districts, the World-Herald said, had authorized their bankers to make the purchase if a satisfactory price agreement could be reached, and the bankers have held preliminary conferences with the holding companies controlling the private concerns.

$150,000 for Inquiry.

The Senate yesterday voted to give the Federal Trade Commission $150,000 for an investigation of alleged obstruction by utilities of the Federal power program.

Imediately after this action was taken, Senator George W. Norris (Independent Republican), Nebraska, took the floor for a detailed denunciation of "disgraceful, illegal and unfair methods" of power firms.

At about the same time, President Roosevelt and a group of advisers were conferring, presumably for the last time, on the mesage to be sent to Congress by Mr. Roosevelt on extension of the Tennessee Valley Authority experiment over the Nation.

The message will go to Congress this week, participants in the conference said later. They said it is possible, but improbable, that it will

Edward to Reveal Date of Wedding, Other Plans Today

By the Associated Press.

Monts, France, May 17.—The Duke of Windsor is ready to announce tomorrow the date for his marriage to Wallis Warfield.

Herman L. Rogers, of New York, spokesman for the former King and Mrs. Warfield, said today the long-awaited announcement will be made at 2:30 p. m. (8:30 a. m., Eastern standard time).

It was expected Rogers also would reveal where the wedding will be held and whether members of the British royal family will attend.

The duke was reported having difficulties with the royal family over the list of guests for the wedding.

Dudley Forward the duke's equerry, was reported to be going to London with a new list of guests for royal approval. On the way back, he is supposed to meet Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman, of Washington, Mrs. Warfield's "Aunt Bessie," and bring her to the chateau.

D. C. Area Rail Workers to Get $160,000 Tax

New Pension Plan in House Provides for Return of $140,000,000 Total.

By William V. Nessly.

Railroad workers of the Capital area yesterday were contemplating early receipt of more than $160,000 to be returned to them under the substitute railroad pension tax now before Congress with virtual certainty of passage. The money was deducted from their pay under the old pension tax but held in special accounts under court order pending settlement of litigation. The new act specifically provides for return of the money.

Other developments, also, interested transportation and rail labor circles.

Daylight Time Bill May End In 'Lie-Down'

Cons Far Outnumber Pros at Hearing; Committee for Measure, Belief.

Advocates of daylight-saving time for Washington yesterday proved they have more time for letter writing than for testifying.

While 12,000 letters favoring the Sacks bill were filed with a House sub-committee as against 2,000 against it, the majority of witnesses who attended the hearing were opposed to moving the clocks forward an hour.

In fact, the sub-committee was confronted with the possibility of a one-man lie-down strike, the danger of disrupting the digestive habits of cows in nearby Maryland and Virginia, and the undisguised resentment of unorganized housewives.

Chairman Sacks (Democrat), of Oklahoma, said a week or ten days will be allowed for the filing of briefs before the sub-committee reaches a decision.

The lineup of the three-man sub-committee appeared to be 2-to-1 for the bill despite the preponderance of testimony against it. Representative Bates (Republican) of Massachusetts, showed himself a supporter of daylight savings time, while Representative McGehee (Democrat) of Mississippi, indicated his skepticism, if not opposition.

E. C. Palmer, of 5608 Fourteenth street northwest, told the sub-committee that he, for one, would not be swayed by Congressional action in the matter.

"It would not make any difference to me what Congress does about the Sacks bill," he said. "I shall not set my clock ahead one minute."

Palmer, who said he was speaking for the "inarticulate workingman," explained under cross-examination he is retired and doesn't have to punch the clock any more.

As a final thrust he suggested indirectly a curfew amendment to the measure.

"If you can legislate us out of bed one hour earlier in the mornings," he said, "you have authority to legislate us in bed one hour earlier at night."

Tumble Injures Girl Acrobat and Would-Be Rescuer

Two members of Barnum and Bailey and Ringling Brothers Circus troupe were injured last night when a perch pole supporting Angela Antalek, 19, baby member of the daring Antaleks, slipped and sent her crashing to the stage, 45 feet below.

Before a crowd of 16,000, the German acrobats were in the middle of their act and had reached the point where Angela was required to swing from the top of the pole balanced on her sister Moncie's shoulder.

Ray Allen, 21, property man, attempted to catch the girl. He was struck by her body and knocked unconscious while checking the fall.

At Casualty Hospital the girl was treated for a compound fracture of the right arm, loss of several teeth and shock. Allen was given first aid on the scene.

Dr. Eckener Chosen Winner Of Guggenheim 1937 Award

There was a silver lining yesterday to the tragic cloud which has hung over the visit of Dr. Hugo Eckener, builder of the ill-fated Hindenberg.

For, manifesting profound confidence in the ability of the mastery of lighter-than-air craft, despite the disaster which claimed 36 lives at Lakehurst when the world's largest aircraft burned, the award board of the Guggenheim Fund announced Dr. Eckener would receive the Daniel Guggenheim medal for 1937.

Presentation will be made at a dinner to be given in his honor in New York, December 17, the thirty-fourth anniversary of the first flight of the Wright brothers, for "notable contributions to transoceanic air transport and to international cooperation in aeronautics."

"Dr. Eckener was nominated last year to receive this honor," Maj. Lester D. Gardner, secretary of the fund, said, "and the board today confirmed the balloting of the members of the award committee.

"While the selection of the recipient was made many months before the loss of the Hindenburg, the members of the board felt that the announcement at this time would convey to Dr. Eckener their assurances of confidence in his ability to continue to make the airship one of the great factors in world air transportation."

Dr. Eckener is attending the inquiry into the Hindenburg disaster.

The Guggenheim fund, established in 1928, provides a gold medal and certificate to be presented annually in recognition of meritorious achievements in the furtherance of aeronautics.

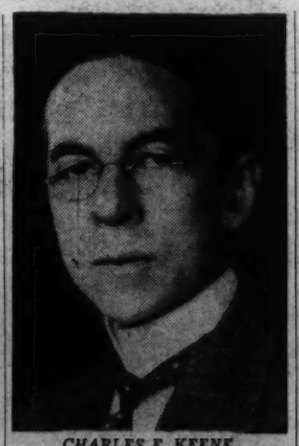
Maryland Enters Keene Boat Death Inquiry; Ace Detective Hunts Clew in Disappearance

Maryland State police will today enter the investigation of the mysterious disappearance of Charles F. Keene, Washington real estate man believed to have been murdered aboard the steamer District of Columbia last Thursday night.

Announcement that Sergt. Marlin Brubaker will be detailed to run down the murderer came yesterday from Capt. Edward Johnson, chief of the State police, shortly after J. Edgar Hoover declined to enter the case.

Sergt. Brubaker was headed for Norfolk, Va., last night and will meet the District of Columbia when she docks there this morning. He will go over the known facts with Norfolk police, will examine the blood-stained stateroom from which Keene vanished, will question boatmen and return on the vessel to the Capital. Here he will meet local police and also question relatives and friends of the missing man.

This was one of many developments of a day which saw authorities declining and volunteering to enter the case at a rapid rate. Until the Maryland State police undertook an investigation, a hopeless muddle as to jurisdiction threatened to forestall any solution, with Virginia, District, and Federal police agencies declining to investigate.



CHARLES F. KEENE.

Then, shortly after the Maryland authorities stepped in, it was learned that the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation would enter the case. The bureau is instructed under recently passed laws to investigate all casualties at sea or upon inland waters. It was also learned the ship's officers had been notified to be ready to testify at a hearing Friday. Eugene Carlson, Norfolk head of the steamboat service, will probably conduct the hearing.

That a more complete record of the facts in the strange disappearance is in the hands of authorities than is generally known was revealed yesterday when it was learned Washington police fingerprint experts had brought to the surface stains from a bloody hand, after the stains had been washed away by steamship stewards.

Charles F. Keene, jr., son of the vanished man, requested Inspector of Detectives Bernard Thompson here yesterday to push the investigation, which Thompson promised to do. Thompson said he would

U. S. Attorney Makes Ruling On Curran Job

President Given Right to Hold Up Postal Appointments.

President Roosevelt held up the actual issuance of the commission of John F. Curran as postmaster at Milford, Mass., the Government announced yesterday in combating a suit brought by Curran to compel issuance of the papers to him.

In a suit filed in District Court Cutran stated he had been nominated, confirmed by the Senate, and his commission prepared when another, John E. Higgiston, was named in his stead. Higgiston likewise received confirmation.

Both men sought to take office and when a stalemate was reached the courts were asked to rule as to which of the men was actually and lawfully postmaster.

Details of Answer.

In its answer yesterday the Government, through Assistant United States Attorney John W. Fihelly, said that inasmuch as the President had unlimited power to remove a postmaster at any time, he also had the power to withold a commission. It was admitted the Chief Executive had held up the commission of Curran.

Curran sought to compel the Postmaster General to formally send him his commission and induct him into office. He claimed the only technicality remaining between him and the job was the receipt of the commission, since he had already completed all other preliminaries. No action was taken on the suit yesterday. It probably will be reached for argument in the next two weeks.

Salary Suit Threat.

The nomination of Curran was approved June 8, he said, but he has never received his commission, though he had frequently demanded that the Postoffice Department send it to him. Suit is now pending in Massachusetts to see whether Curran of his rival is entitled to physicial possession of the books and papers of the postoffice.

Higgiston's appointment was confirmed by the Senate March 24. Curran has threatened to file suit against the United States in the Court of Claims in an effort to obtain the salary that was supposed to have gone to him as postmaster.

U. S. Interference In Power Attacked

New York, May (AP).—A fresh assault on the Tennessee Valley Authority and other "unregulated" governmental agencies which compete with private power companies was made today by Wendell L. Willkie, president of Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, in his report to stockholders for 1936.

At the same time, he said, the company entertained hopes that if "long established precedents of law are maintained," the Government would be prevented from establishing a hydroelectric power system "in a coal-producing area where electric energy can be produced by steam for two-thirds of the amount per unit that can be developed by hydro."

The report, which surveyed lengthily the company's troubles with TVA, confirmed preliminary estimates of 13 cents a share earned on the common stock in 1936.

Consolidated gross revenues showed a gain of $13,172,249, or 11 per cent more than 1935, Willkie reported. Operating expenses, taxes and other costs of doing business increased $10,788,460, or 15 per cent, the increase in taxes alone being $1,860,985, the report continued.

Senate Foes of Court Reorganization in Full Control; Vote Against Compromise.

By Franklyn Waltman

As the first round in the titanic struggle over President Roosevelt's Supreme Court reorganization program opens in the Senate Judiciary Committee today, it is clear for the first time opponents of that legislation are in control of the situation.

WALTMAN.

Not only will they control the Senate Judiciary Committee's actions, but they will dominate the proceedings some days hence on the Senate floor, unless in the meanwhile Mr. Roosevelt manages to recapture the leadership on this question, which has slipped from his grasp. Barring an adverse decision by the Supreme Court on the social security act, it is doubtful whether he can recapture a Senatorial majority for his bill.

If concrete evidence of this were needed it came late yesterday in the meeting of the 15 leading Democratic opponents of the Supreme Court reorganization bill. They determinedly took a stand against accepting any compromise and announced their purpose to fight out the issue in a head-on collision with the President.

Were this group in any doubt regarding their strength and ability to defeat the President they would not have shut the door on a compromse. Their action, of course, does not bind other opponents not present, who by combining with the President's supporters may in the end pass a compromise measure. But the group which met in Senator Wheeler's office yesterday appeared to be confident that they were not climbing out on a limb.

When examined objectively the development of the present situation is truly amazing. Here is President Roosevelt, who six months ago won the greatest victory at the polls ever achieved by an American President, apparently headed for defeat in the most momentous legislative battle in several decades of American history.

Should Mr. Roosevelt be defeated on this issue, as the present situation strongly indicates he will be, historians of the future, without doubt, will be perplexed by the anomaly that a man who could rally 27,000,000 Americans to his support was unable to win the backing of 49 Senators of his own party.

As close as we are to the picture, the answer to us is not clear. Underlying the entire battle, of course, is the fact that Mr. Roosevelt has undertaken to tamper with an institution held in high respect and esteem by the American people. Ingrained in Americans from their kindergarten days is a veneration for the Supreme Court. Not even President Roosevelt, popular hero that he is, it seems, could overcome that predilection.

Another factor is that from the President's viewpoint his fight has been bungled from the beginning. It might be said that he was ill-advised, but it also has become clear that he was insufficiently advised and that was his own fault. Perhaps the enormity of the President's victory in November led him to believe it was no longer necessary for him to seek some of the advisers he might have consulted.

Having determined to force a reorganization of the Supreme Court in order to obtain a tribunal sympathetic to his views, the President started off on the wrong foot. Instead of candidly explaining the motives which inspired his action, Mr. Roosevelt undertook to resort to the shabby and unsupported improvisation that the courts needed additional judges because incumbents over 70 years of age were unable, or unwilling, to do their share of the work.

Within a few days of his message to Congress his original contentions had been so completely exploded that the President was forced to abandon them and project the real reasons for his program. Thus for a month or so the President surrounded his program with widespread confusion in the public mind.

The President's fight was further bungled by a display of overconfidence on his part and that of his close lieutenants. Mr. Roosevelt would not believe, it seemed, that he possibly could be defeated on this issue. He laughed heartily over newspaper accounts that opposition to his plan was mounting and recalled that many newspapers last fall either had predicted his defeat in the election or had told their readers he was fighting with his back to the wall.

Thus Mr. Roosevelt serenely went off on a fishing trip during a period when a compromise might have been worked out with his opponents. Now it seems the time has passed for compromise. Despite the statements which came from the White House over the week-end, the proponents of the court bill would like to compromise, but they cannot find a middle ground satisfatcory to the majority of the opponents.

Nor has Mr. Roosevelt's cause been helped by the callous and shameless references to the efficacy of patronage and log-rolling devices in getting support for the bill, such as that of Postmaster-General James A. Farley in the White House vestibule last Friday. Such utterances make it impossible for self-respecting men, when they are so mentioned, to go along with the President. But so invincible do the New Dealers believe they have become that they fail to appreciate how objectionable their methods have become. Thus one bungle piled on another slowly—but surely, it appears—is burying the court bill.

There has been no desire here to do a post-mortem on the court reorganization bill. Such legislative corpses sometimes are resuscitated and become vigorous just as preparations are being made to bury them. Again, so unreal and bungling has been the fight over this measure that this writer has never been convinced that Mr. Roosevelt ever intended unqualifiedly to go through with his proposal.

This thought is based on the possibility that Mr. Roosevelt intended his court proposal as a threat over the Supreme Court, to be carried out only if the court ignored the threat. So far this term the court has not invalidated a single piece of New Deal legislation. There remains only the Social Security taxes. If they are upheld Mr. Roosevelt has achieved all he wants and he might let it be known that he no longer is interested in the passage of that measure. Such Machiavellian maneuvering is the only logical explanation that some observers are able to find for some of the strange things done during this fight.

be finished in time to be sent to the Capitol today.

It will call for establishment of eight regional authorities, covering the country, for the development of a vast integrated program. This program wil include power development, soil improvement, flood control, navigation and a variety of social and cultural experimentation such as the TVA now is conducting in the South.

Eight Regional Authorities.

The President, said one of the advisers who talked with him yesterday, will not request funds for construction projects, but will ask that a complete Nation-wide organization be set up and provision be made for its expenses in administration and conduct of surveys.

It was said by this source that the message, and the bill to be introduced this week by Norris embodying the message's recommendations, will not provide for the Bonneville Dam. This is because bills are now pending in a House committee to establish an administrative set-up for that giant project.

In the conference at the White House, Secretaries Ickes, of Interior; Wallace, of Agriculture, and Woodring, of War, shared, as did Chairman McNinch, of the Power Commission, and others.

Passage of the Norris resolution was achieved without objection or a record vote in the Senate. It was amended, however, at the suggestion of Senator King (Democrat), Utah, to include activities of Federal agencies, including TVA, the Public Works Administration, Rural Electrification Administration, and others.

Includes U. S. Agencies.

King said these agencies had indulged in "propaganda." His amendment was accepted by Norris without objection. The resolution goes to the House, concurrence of which is necessary.

In his justification of the resolution, Norris said that "no one else has gone so far to defeat the will of the people" and cited as an example an Iowa instance wherein he charged a power company had paid a municipal ownership advocate $400 a month for five years for "lectures" which were never delivered.

"That contract was made to close his mouth," Norris asserted. "And it did close it. And the people who paid the electric bills never knew that part of their money was being spent for bribery."

Mexican Convicts To Receive Wages For Prison Labor

Mexico City, May 17 (AP).—The Federal District Penitentiary has adopted a minimum wage and granted union privileges in an experiment for rehabilitating hardened criminals.

The prisoners henceforth will be known as "natural biological units susceptible of correction," officials said today. They will work in the prison shops and live a life much like that of a free man.

For work in the prison shops they will be paid 2.25 pesos, or 61 cents a day. Out of this wage they must pay for food, clothing and cell rent, estimated to total 1.60 pesos a day.

The remainder of his wages will be divided thus—40 per cent for those who suffered from his crime, 30 per cent for his family, and 30 per cent for a savings account he may draw when he leaves the institution.

Society of Composers Outlawed in Nebraska

Lincoln, Nebr., May 17 (AP).—Attorney General Richard C. Hunter said tonight he was unable to determine what steps would be taken to enforce the act outlawing the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers in Nebraska "until I read it."

The law, signed by Gov. R. L. Cochran today, despite protestations of opponents that the measure was unconstitutional, became effective at once.

Senator Frank J. Brady, who introduced the measure, accused A. S. C. A. P. of conducting a "reign of terror" to collect fees from radio stations, theaters, hotels, restaurants and clubs.

Capitol Employes' Pay Bill Enacted

Legislative employes will be able to do their Christmas shopping earlier hereafter under provisions of a House bill passed yesterday by the Senate.

The measure, which now goes to the White House, authorizes the payment of December salaries of employes of Congress on December 20.

The Senate passed over, upon request of Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, a bill to extend the retirement act to legislative employes.

Byrd Supports Plan to Merge Power Control

Brookings Institution Asks Single Administration Instead of 4.

Despite an Administration maneuver to revive the President's reorganization bill by splitting it into four separate measures, Senator Harry Flood Byrd, of Virginia, leading opponent of the plan, yesterday plugged away for counter proposals of the Brookings Institution.

Byrd made public two more chapters of the Brookings reorganization study, recommending consolidation of Federal power activities into a single "Federal Power Administration."

Leaving out of the proposed merger security regulation and physical operation of Government-owned plants, the Brookings plan would combine the present power commission, the power division of PWA, the Rural Electrification Administration and the Electric Home and Farm Authority.

Leadership plans to revive the President's original reorganization plan, at White House request, coincided yesterday with an opposition report by a special committee of the National Industrial Traffic League, headed by R. C. Fulbright. The traffic league report voiced particular opposition to proposed reorganization of the Interstate Commerce Commission, chiefly on the ground that I. C. C. independence should be maintained.

"There can be no question but what the shippers of the United States prefer that the commission be left absolutely independent of any political influence or from any domination, in whole or in part, of any Governmental officer who may be termed a part of the current political administration," the Fulbright report stated. "This attitude does not denote any reflection upon any executive officer of the Government. It merely signifies the desire of the public to have the activities of the commission just as independent from political or administration influence as are deliberations of the Supreme Court * * *"

Senator Byrd also has opposed any tampering with I. C. C. or other quasi-judicial agencies.

The Brookings study recommended discontinuance of further Federal Trade Commission power studies, and urged abolition of the National Power Policy Committee. In the field of mineral resources, functions of the Petroleum Conservation division would be restricted, and prevention-of-waste studies transferred to the Bureau of Mines.

Brookings experts said "substantial budgetary savings" would result from the changes recommended.

Soviet Kidnaping Charged.

Hsinking, Manchukuo, May 17 (AP).—The Manchukuoan government today protested to Soviet Russia over the alleged kidnaping of five Manchukuoans by the Soviet secret police. Soviet G. P. U. officials were accused in the protest of using hand grenades and invading the Manchukuo frontier.

Maryland Joins Inquiry in Boat Death of Keene

Ace Detective of State's Police Seeking Clews; Body Being Hunted.

wire Norfolk, Va., authorities to obtain pohtographs of bloodstains found in and around the missing man's cabin.

After the son appealed to Inspector Thompson here, Detective Sergt. V. H. Larsen was sent to the missing man's home at the Fairfax Hotel, to try to locate fingerprints of Mr. Keene from articles around the hotel suite. He was unable to find any. Police wanted to try to match them with fingerprints taken from the outside of the ship, which were raised with chemicals, though they had been swabbed off by sailors.

Young Keene was desperately anxious to force an investigation, being positive, he said, that his father was murdered. "It cannot be," he exclaimed, "that the Potomac River is a legal no-man's-land where travelers go unprotected by any law enforcement agency whatever."

Washington police, after a cursory investigation during which fingerprints were taken and studied and an attempt was made to locate an important witness, decided that the crime, if any, apparently was committed outside the District.

Norfolk police were positive the crime was committed in Maryland and that they had no jurisdiction, although the empty, blood-stained stateroom was discovered after the steamer docked in Norfolk. The Potomac River is Maryland territorial water as far as the Virginia shore.

The son of the missing man, a naval officer, after being balked in efforts to force a thorough sifting of the case, turned to the Department of Justice yesterday, but after attorneys counseling J. Edgar Hoover looked up the law on the subject, they advised their chief that the Federal Government had no jurisdiction.

It was then that Capt. Johnson, of the Maryland State police, entered the case. He said, "We will look into it, and we'll do our best to solve it. We intend to begin by tracing the movements of the boat and the man, to try to ascertain where the crime was committed."

A Coast Guard cutter, under the command of Capt. Roger C. Weightman, out of Norfolk, was searching Chesapeake Bay yesterday and last night for the body. It was expected it would appear on the surface after about three or four days submersion. "We will keep up the search as long as it is practicable to do so," a Coast Guard spokesman said yesterday.

Finding the body will be of utmost importance in a solution of the mystery, according to police, who would then be able to determine in what manner the 63-year-old real estate man was slain. They expect to find bullet holes or other wounds which will be of great value in their investigations.

Norfolk Police Co-operate.

Detective Leon Nowitzky, of Norfolk, who has been working on the case at Norfolk, said yesterday that he would like to talk to members of the Keene family. He expressed a strong wish that jurisdiction in the puzzling case would be established and added that Norfolk police would co-operate in every way possible.

Several identifications of Keene by persons on the steamer the night he disappeared have been discounted as improbably by authorities. It was variously reported by employes on the boat that they had seen Keene talking to "a big husky man in rough clothes," and was seen "drinking coca-cola with another man." It was believed that those who said they saw the missing man were uncertain as to who they saw.

A theory advanced by Norfolk police that Keene might possibly have been suffering with tuberculosis was promptly denied by the son here yesterday. A Norfolk officer had suggested that the man may have suffered a lung hemorrhage, rushed to the stateroom window, and accidentally fallen overboard.

Charles Keene, jr., said that his father did not have any lung ailment and that furthermore, the finding of bloodstains on a handrail girdling the vessel, several feet from his stateroom, could not possibly be explained on any such basis.

Suicide for insurance was likewise promptly denied by the son, who said his father had only a very small policy amounting to $1,500. The son added that his father's financial condition, which he checked thoroughly at various banks here yesterday, was adequate, and that there could be no reason for suicide because of financial worries. He explained further that his home life was happy. He was certain that foul play ended his father's life.

While different authorities were denying jurisdiction yesterday up until late afternoon a Coast Guard spokesman said that the Coast Guard might step in later if no one else entered the investigation. The Coast Guard, a Treasury subdepartment, maintains an investigative force of its own.

Keene disappeared from his stateroom, No. 79, sometime during the night run to Norfolk, where he was going to complete a business deal which was promising and "looked good," he told friends. No one saw him go overboard. His stateroom was found empty when the boat landed at Norfolk.

His bed was unslept in, a bloodstain as large as a silver dollar was found on the bedspread, a slightly smaller stain was found on the washstand and two dots of blood were found on the window sill on the inside of the stateroom. The room is the last one aft, on the second deck. There is an unobstructed fall to the water below.

Outside on the handrail were found some blood smears, and 10 feet back from the window was found a much larger bloodstain. This bloodstain was on the main rail which guards the after deck. Keene's window was about 4 feet from the after deck, within easy access of a marauder. His purse, containing $40, was missing.

T. J. Shannon, purser on the ship and first to enter the stateroom after a maid had found the bloodstains, has told police that the vessel was unusually quiet that night, that there was no dancing or drinking aboard, and that everyone was in his bunk and out of the salon before midnight.

As Woman's Death Was Investigated

place and Mrs. Lizzie Jaynes, the cashier, was mortally wounded.

None of the four was called as a witness at Jordon's trial last year, although the police knew that they had been in the cafe.

The names of the four were listed in an affidavit which John M. Holzworth, erstwhile attorney for Jordon, filed with the United States Court of Appeals yesterday to bear out his contention that not all the evidence in the case was disclosed at Jordon's trial.

Holzworth learned of their presence in the cafe on the fateful night while going through the police records recently.

Mr. Schneider said last night that Assistant United States Attorney Robb conferred with him last week about the Jordon case. He said Robb explained that, in checking over his file of the case, he had run across Schneider's name and wanted to go over a statement he (Schneider) had given him long before Jordon's trial.

This morning Schneider expects to appear before a House District sub-committee which has been assigned to inquire into charges made by Holzworth before the full House District Committee last week.

Representative Vincent L. Palmisano, of Maryland, who heads the "crime sub-committee," has announced that he and his colleagues will sit as a sort of grand jury. If they think enough of Holzworth's charges, he says, he will recommend a general investigation to the full committee; otherwise the inquiry will end today.

Schneider's version of the Garden T-Shoppe holdup, as given to The Post last night, differs somewhat from the versions given by others.

"Our party was seated at a table about in the middle of the restaurant," Schneider said. "I saw the two men come in. I would say they were of medium height, and one was a trifle shorter than the other. The taller of the two had a mask covering his face. He took a position at the door and pointed a gun in front of him.

"The other man, the shorter of the two, went behind the cashier's cage, where Mrs. Jaynes was sitting. He had not yet pulled the mask over his face. It was up around his forehead. He stopped at the cashier's cage for a moment, and then walked down behind the counter until he was opposite our table. He still did not have his mask on.

"He talked to a girl behind the counter a moment, and it appeared that he was disgusted at not having found what he expected. At this point he pulled the mask down over his face and started back toward the cashier's cage. Then we heard the shot, and we heard somebody yell, 'Let's get out of here.'

"In my opinion, this man behind the counter must have fired the shot. The man near the door could not have wounded Mrs. Jaynes without going behind the cashier's cage. She was shot in the stomach, and that part of her body was behind the counter.

"I feel pretty sure the shooting was accidental. There was no reason to shoot. Nobody was offering any resistance. Somebody was coming through the front door, and apparently the fellow, who was pretty young, got nervous."

Schneider said that there was a plate glass on the counter at the Garden T-Shoppe and that they saw the bandit through that. He said he had never seen Jordon, and that he doubted whether he would be able to identify the bandit at this late date—six years after the crime.

"My memory on the thing is vague now," he said, "but the man, as I remember it, tended to be fair. At least, he wasn't dark."

Jordon has dark eyes and black hair.

The young woman behind the counter, the one that Schneider said the bandit talked to, apparently was Mildred Colt.

Her version of the crime differs from his, in that it is her recollection that it was the man near the door that actually held up Mrs. Jaynes and apparently fired the shot. She said she was watching the man behind the counter at the time, and he couldn't have fired the shot.

U. S. Employe's Wife Shot Self, Study Indicates

F. B. I. Expert Finds Burns of Powder; Refutes Broken Nose.

Evidence supporting the theory that Mrs. Mabel V. Hartman shot herself was disclosed last night by Dr. Aaron Dietz, of Hyattsville, Md., who said tests conducted by the Department of Justice revealed there were powder burns around the wound in the woman's temple.

Dr. Dietz contradicted earlier reports that the Lanham, Md., woman's nose had been broken. The discoloration noted around the woman's eyes was caused by a hemorrhage, he also said.

Mrs. Hartman was found dead about 500 feet from her home Sunday by her 10-year-old son, William. A .22-caliber rifle was found beside her, near her right hand.

The woman's husband, Paul Hartman, a veterinarian employed at the Beltsville, Md., Experimental Farm, was questioned yesterday by police after he returned from a motor trip to Pennsylvania.

Criminologists of the Federal Bureau of Investigation were called into the case yesterday to make laboratory tests of clews. These were several strands of hair found entangled in the butt of the rifle found beside the woman's body, fingerprints on the gun trigger, described by investigators as exceptionally clear, and a parafin mold made of the wound in Mrs. Hartman's temple.

Hartman, who voluntarily gave himself up at Upper Marlboro yesterday morning, said he left home Saturday at 11 a. m. after a quarrel with his wife, drove to visit his parents and members of his wife's family and returned at 11 p. m. Sunday.

2 D. C. Detectives Find Ann Corio's $800 Fox Scarf

Detective Sergts. Mike Down and Leo Murray, of the First Precinct, made good in a hurry when they were assigned to solve the case of the theft of Ann Corio's silver fox scarf worth $800.

Perhaps it was because the detectives may have known that Miss Corio, strip-tease artiste, who played the Gayety Theater last week, is now in Toronto and might be needing the warming furs.

Anyway, the scarf last night was safe at police headquarters and a young man, bellboy at a downtown hotel from which the furs were stolen, was held under an open charge.

Mother Asserts She Held Baby, Lover Slew Her

Mrs. Tiernan Says 'Boy Friend' Struck With Ax; He Denies It.

had responded: "How can we when the kids are around? They're in the way.

Such a discussion last Friday night led to formation of plans for disposing of the children, and at that time she made a list of the weapons that would be needed, including an ax, a knife, scissors and gasoline.

Saturday morning Christie picked her and the children up in his car and drove them to Brookhaven, Long Island, where the wounded boy and the body of his sister were found Sunday.

There, in the woods, the mother held the girl while Christie hit her with the hatchet. Then the mother used the knife to slash both the girl and the boy, who was not struck with the hatchet.

Shortly after midnight tonight detectives took Christie from headquarters to his residence to check on his alibi for Saturday.

Earlier today police had reported that the 28-year-old blonde widow had confessed she tried to kill her children because the apartment in which they lived was too small to share with the man she loved.

Deputy Chief Inspector Francis K. Kear, who announced the confession, said the mother at first asserted she and the children were attacked "by a strange man" as they munched a box lunch in the woodlands 65 miles from New York City.

Mrs. Tiernan was seized as she went to a day nursery to report she had left her children with her brother in Bergenfield, N. J.

Jimmy's story from his hospital bed and recognition of his photograph by officials of the day nursery where he had been left while his mother worked led police to order Mrs. Tiernan's arrest.

Investigator Morris said Mrs. Tiernan was shaken when told of her son's statement that he saw her strike and cut his sister, and then in turn attacked him.

Carried Ax in Lunch Box.

"Everything James said is the truth," Morris quoted her as saying. Then, he said, "Mrs. Tiernan admitted everything."

"She said she first cut the throat of her daughter and then attacked her son," he said. Morris said Mrs. Tiernan described how the box in which a picnic lunch was packed for the children also contained a small ax, a butcher knife, a pair of scissors and a bottle filled with gasoline.

"Mrs. Tiernan said she took the children to Brookhaven Sunday morning," he said. "She had with her the small bottle of gasoline which she threw over the bodies of the children after she killed the daughter and cut her son's throat."

Morris said that after covering the bodies of her children with leaves and setting them afire, Mrs. Tiernan went to Jones Beach, a third of the way to New York on the South Shore of Long Island.

There, according to Morris, she met her "boy friend."

"I met George at Jones Beach," Morris quoted her. "We stayed at the beach until night, when he returned to New York."

A Brookhaven High School girl, walking through the woods to her home, stumbled over the dead girl's body. Frightened, she ran for aid, and searching officers found Jimmy, his throat cut and his head bruised.

The two remained unidentified last night, and it was not until Miss Elizabeth O'Connor, head nurse at Community Hospital in Patchogue, questioned the wounded boy today that their names were learned.

"I questioned the boy as soon as he was able to understand me," Miss O'Connor said.

"When I asked him how he cut his head he said, 'Mommy cut me and hit me and then she hit Helen. I was very scared.'

"I asked him if he wanted to go back to his mother.

"'No, I don't,' he answered. Then he kept talking about a train ride."

Long Island officials immediately sent out a teletype alarm and Mrs. Tiernan's seizure followed.

Dr. Arthur Trivett Funeral Is Today

Final rites will be held for Dr. Arthur M. Trivett, 65, who died yesterday in Emergency Hospital, at 2 p. m. today at his residence, 808 Aspen street. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

A native of North Carolina, Dr. Trivett was graduated in dentistry from the old Columbian Dental College, now George Washington University, and began practice here in 1906.

He was a past master of the Masons, and a member of Brightwood Commandery, Knights Templar. He also was a member of the board of trustees of the Petworth M. E. Church.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Carrie E. Tdivett; three brothers, David M. Trivett, Beaver Dam, Va.; L. M. Trivett, Vilas, N. C., and Calvin Trivett, Boone, N. C., and three sisters, Mrs. R. A. Brown, of Boone; Mrs. Alice Hayes, of Vilas, and Mrs. Mary Hodges, also of North Carolina.

House Group To Open Study Of Abattoir Ban

Capital 'Nuisance' Fight to Come Before Two Units Today.

Simultaneously with the resumption of Senate sub-committee hearings tomorrow on the King "nuisance industry" bill, the House District Committee will consider the companion measure introduced by Chairman Mary T. Norton.

"I am vigorously opposed to the erection of a slaughterhouse in Washington," Mrs. Norton asserted as she announced she would call her bill up for consideration tomorrow.

Like the legislation proposed by Chairman William H. King, of the Senate District Committee, her bill would prevent the establishment of new "nuisance industries" in the Capital and rigidly regulate those now in operation.

Determined to keep the Adolf Gobel Co. from erecting an abattoir and rendering plant at Benning road and Minnesota avenue northeast, Mrs. Norton is hopeful her committee will decide to conduct hearings on her measure.

At 2 p. m. tomorrow, on the Senate side, the McCarran sub-committee will hear a group of Maryland farmers on the King bill in a resumption of the investigation begun last Tuesday.

Appeals Court Reverses Bank Holiday Ruling

Federal - American Test Involves Many Withdrawals.

The President's ukase closing the Nation's banks in March of 1933 went so far as to preclude payment of cashier's checks, the United States Court of Appeals held yesterday in reversing a prior ruling of District Court.

The question was presented in a suit brought by Cary A. Hardee, receiver of the closed Federal-American National Bank, who is seeking to recoup for the bank half of a $3,000 check paid in cash to Mrs. Minnie Dixon Young, March 3.

Mrs. Young, a depositor, obtained the check and took it to the Washington Loan & Trust Co. the same day. The following day—March 6—was a holiday and the banks remined closed. The fifth was Sunday.

March 6 President Roosevelt issued his famous order temporarily suspending banking operations. Later on it was held by the Washington Clearing House Association that cashier's checks and certified checks should be paid by the member banks.

Thus Mrs. Young obtianed her money in cash only a few hours before it was learned the bank would not be permitted to reopen. Thereafter, Mr. Hardee demanded half of the check back on the theory other depositors were receiving only half of their accounts and that Mrs. Young was not entitled to any larger percentage.

She refused the demand and suit, filed in District Court, was met with a denial of the receiver's right to compel resitution.

In reversing that opinion the Appellate Court said that cashing of the check was within the list of operations banned by the President's proclamation, and that it should not have been paid. Huston Thompson, Herbert Ward and T. H. Patterson represented Mr. Hardee.

Officials stated last night other checks would be affected by the ruling, but that they were in no position now to say how many, or what amount of money was involved.

Payment Ordered For Homes Ruined By Bonus Marchers

Echoes of the Bonus Army of 1932 resounded on Capitol Hill yesterday as the Senate passed a bill to pay $4,500 for the demolition of two houses by the veterans during their encampment in Washington.

The bill, which previously had passed the House, authorized payment of a claim of Mrs. Howard Bloedorn, of the Burlington Hotel.

The houses were located on Sheridan road southeast, between Daggs lane and Bowen road. It was while the houses were being used as an improvised hospital, with the owner's permission, that they allegedly were demolished so that the lumber might be used in building shacks.

Taxpayers Suit Filed.

Prince Frederick, Md., May 17 (AP).—Taxpayers representing all three districts of Calvert County filed suit in circuit court here today asking that the board of county commissioners be restrained from levying certain taxes which the action claimed are illegal.

July 4 Display Will Be Held At Water Gate

Fireworks to Soar From Boat in Potomac; Group in Charge Meets.

In the first step toward turning $800 into smoke, noise and color, a citizens' committee for the annual Fourth of July fireworks display met at a luncheon yesterday at the Harrington Hotel.

The committee, of which District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen was chosen head, decided to hold the event this year at the Water Gate. The Monument grounds, usual site of the Independence Day celebration, will be in use this year for the Boy Scout Jamboree.

The fireworks will be set off from a boat anchored in the Potomac. Reflection of bursting bombs and skyrockets in the water is expected to lend an unusual touch to the event.

Precautions will have to be taken, Hazen said, to time the fireworks to avoid coinciding with the schedules of New York-Washington airplanes, which often fly directly over the site.

Besides the fireworks, the celebration will include a military display and speaking by a "national figure," as yet not selected. Military organizations will take part in a massing of the colors ceremony.

About 10,000 tickets for seats near the Water Gate will go on sale within a short time. They will cost 25 cents each.

Members of the general sponsoring committee—Commissioners Hazen and George E. Allen, Dr. Frank W. Ballou, Arno B. Cammerer, Senator Arthur Capper, Representative Ross A. Collins, Senator Royal S. Copeland, Frederic A. Delano, Stephen T. Early, C. Marshall Finnan, Admiral Cary T. Grayson, Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, Senator William H. King, John T. Lambert, Marvin H. McIntyre, Lowell Mellett, Eugene Meyer, Mrs. Mary T. Norton, Newbold Noyes, James Roosevelt, Commissioner Dan I. Sultan, Senator Elmer Thomas and Col. J. M. Wainwright.

The executive committee—Hazen, chairman; Edgar Morris, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle and George W. Offutt, vice chairmen, and Mrs. Elizabeth E. Peeples.

Other committees:

Advisory committee, Ford E. Young, chairman; amplification committee, G. R. Wilhelm, chairman; city direction and illumination committee, Wilmer J. Waller, chairman, and James Owens, vice chairman; community participation committee, Thomas E. Lodge, chairman, and Woolsey W. Hall, vice chairman.

Girl's Body, Note Found in Flat Filled With Gas

Rachel Conyers, 21, was found dead in her gas-filled apartment on the fifth floor of 705 Eighteenth street, northwest, yesterday afternoon.

She was found on a cot in the kitchen by David C. Taylor, elevator operator. Three burners on the stove were open.

A note addressed to Miss Conyers' roommate, Miss Edna Thomas, 25, PWA employe, was found in the living room. It read:

"Edna: Tell Capt. John Barclay why I did this. Don't tell mother."

Miss Thomas told Detective Sergt. William Liverman her roommate had been in low spirits for several weeks following an argument with a young man. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald was investigating last night.

Science Aid Asked To Cut Auto Deaths

Chicago, May 17 (AP).—The National Safety Council invoked the aid of science tonight in a renewed effort to curb America's 100-a-day traffic death rate.

The organization's executive committee singled out five pressing problems—intoxication, excessive speed, pedestrians, accident-prone drivers and the special hazards of night motoring—as subjects for "intensive factual scientific study and research."

Committees were set up to direct investigations in each of those categories. Their personnel consists of physicians, police officials, psychologists, automobile, highway and traffic engineers, educators, psychiatrists, judges of safety courts, chemical and illumination experts.

Night Club Girl's Letters Checked For Murder Clews

Paris, May 17 (AP).—French secret police, searching for clews in one of the most baffling crimes in years, tonight read scores of passionate love letters written by admirers of Leticia Nourissat's charms before she was the victim of a "murder in the subway."

The 30-year-old night club hostess, whose limpid black eyes attracted many men, was stabbed to death as she sat in a first-class coach of a metropolitan subway train.

Six persons waiting to board the coach as it rolled into Porto Doree station saw the girl—alone in the carriage—tumble grotesquely to the floor with blood spurting from her jugular vein as the train jolted to a halt.

A 6-inch knife, suggesting Apache crimes, had been driven to the hilt into the back of her neck, behind the right ear.

Dixie Newsprint Makers Honored

Hot Springs, Ark., May 17 (AP).—Advised that Southern newsprint manufacture was assured, the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association accorded ovations today to James G. Stahlman, publisher of the Nashville Banner and chairman of its newsprint committee, and to Dr. Charles H. Herty, Savannah, Ga., scientist, whose research laid the groundwork for bringing the industry to the South.

In responding, both visualized a new economic day for Dixie through recognition of multiple use of Southern pine in newsprint manufacture and in many allied products. Stahlman, recently elected president of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, predicted a billion dollar industrial development around Southern pine growth in the next 15 years.

Auto Workers Discuss Action Against Ford

Union Holds 'Fordisms' Are Violation of Wagner Act.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 17.—The United Automobile Workers committee on organizing Ford Motor Co. employes discussed in a special meeting tonight whether to charge Henry Ford with employe intimidation.

Homer Martin, U. A. W. A. president heading the committee, said the distribution to Ford workers today of "Fordism" cards containing the motorcar manufacturer's views on labor unions occasioned the meeting.

The union, Martin said, might contend the Ford Co.'s action violated the Wagner act, and might file a complaint with the National Labor Relations Board.

One "Fordism" was, "We have never had to bargain against our men and we don't expect to begin now."

The union committee is preparing for an intensive drive beginning this week to organize plants of the Ford Co., the only large automobile manufacturer which has no written or verbal agreement with the U. A. W. A.

Cinema Strike Violence.

Hollywood, May 17 (AP).—An automobile was overturned and fist fights ensued today as 300 striking movie craftsmen returned to work.

Police dispersed combatants in a free-for-all fight that followed the crowding into the curb of a car carrying four Columbia studio laborers to work. One was injured.

In the melee headlights and windshields were smashed as some of the men brought car cranks into use. Police said three carloads of men overturned the laborers' machine into a curb.

Returning to work today were members of the culinary workers and the camera machinists crafts, two of the 11 crafts that walked out on the strike call April 30.

The central strike committee of the Federated Motion Picture Crafts, sponsor of the walkout, said 5,000 craftsmen and laborers still were on strike. Charles Kimberlin, speaking for the committee, said another truce proposal from producers had been vetoed.

"We have informed Pat Casey, labor conciliator for the producers, that we are not interested in any truce unless we get union shop and union recognition," Kimberlin said. Crafts still on strike, he said, are the scenic artists, stationary engineers, plumbers, painters, molders, sheet metal workers, blacksmiths, studio utility workers and make-up artists.

Steel Workers to Vote.

Pittsburgh, May 17 (AP).—Labor leaders in steel mustered their supporters tonight for the largest industrial election in the Nation's history.

They indicated the results of the poll will influence a course of peace or war against five major independent steel companies employing 188,000 men.

The election, to be held Thursday, will involve 27,000 employes of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation. The question to be decided is whether they will be represented in collective bargaining by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

While Regional Director Ernest C. Dunbar of the National Labor Board completed plans for the election, Chairman Philip Murray of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee prepared to meet tomorrow with officials of the Crucible Steel Co. of America, one of the five independents.

Crucible will be the first to receive directly from Murray the ultimatum, "sign or face a strike within ten days."

Murray announced the threat at a strategy meeting last Saturday, directed against Crucible, the Republic Steel Corporation, Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. and the Inland Steel Corporation.

He indicated the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, with 80,000 workers, would be included in the militant drive for sole collective bargaining recognition for the union, affiliated with the John L. Lewis Committee for Industrial Organization.

Gulf Sailors Strike.

Houston, Tex., May 17 (AP).—A seamen's strike was caled today on Lykes Brothers' ships, largest fleet in Gulf waters. At laest five vessels, one at Houston, one at Beaumont and three at New Orleans, were affected.

Officials of the International Seamen's Union said the strike was in protest of "working conditions and company recognition of the National Martime Union."

Alfonso Repudiates Covadonga For Cuban Loves, Royal Hopes

Former Spanish Monarch to Cease Paying Bills for 'Caprices.'

By the United Press.

Rome, May 17.—Former King Alfonso of Spain decided tonight, on his fifty-first birthday, to sever all relations with his eldest son, the Count of Covadonga, the United Press was informed by a confidant of the exiled monarch.

Alfonso was said to be enraged by the 30-year-old count's recent divorce from a Cuban beauty, his projected marriage to another Cuban commoner and his aspirations to sit some day on the now nonexistent throne of Spain.

"His majesty sees himself compelled to sever all relations with his eldest son, believing that in so doing he is interpreting the sentiments of his country and his (Catholic) church," Alfonso's friend said.

Alfonso, it was revealed, refuses to answer his son's letters from Cuba, but until recently he paid the bills for Covadonga's "caprices and business failures."

The count, near death several times from hemophilia, which is his royal heritage, tried for a time to sell automobiles in New York.

The United Press' informant refused to say whether the former king was discontinuing his son's allowance.

The Count of Covadonga was divorced May 8 in Havana from Edelmira Sampedro, whom he married June 21, 1933, in defiance of the royal family's objections. He announced, immediately after the divorce, he would marry Senorita Marta Rocafort, daughter of a Havana dentist, perhaps this week.

Later he said he might return to Europe to await a possible recall to the Spanish throne of the Bourbons, because his father never again could reign even if the monarchy were restored.

Alfonso was described as being "deeply hurt."

Bandit's Girl Says Slayings Were Justified

'I Still Love Him,' She Tells New York Prosecutor.

By the Associated Press.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., May 17.—Assistant District Attorney Ely Gellert said tonight that Bernice Felton, 18-year-old sweetheart of Lester Brockelhurst, excused "his killings as committed in self-defense."

Gellert said the girl arrested with the youth told of their "six week' tour of crime throughout 14 Midwest and Southern States" in a lengthy statement.

"I still love him," Gellert said the girl told him. "He's a boy that wouldn't want to shoot anyone for the pleasure of it, or anything like that."

He said the girl explained carefully that neither she nor her youthful, frail-looking companion used tobacco or liquor.

Gellert said Miss Felton told him that she met Brokelhurst at a Mormon Church festival three years ago and that she "believes she is going to become a mother."

"But," he quoted her as saying, "there has been no time for a wedding since we left Rockford, March 31."

Meanwhile, at Albany, Arkansas won a three-State battle for the privilege of trying Brockelhurst.

Gov. Lehman announced, following a conference of authorities from Illinois, Texas and Arkansas, that he would sign extradition papers sending the youth to the latter State.

There, Brockelhurst will face trial for the slaying of Victor Gates, wealthy Lonoke County plantation owner. Bernice Felton will be tried for being an accessory to the murder.

District Attorney John R. Schwartz said Brockelhurst had admitted killing Gates, Albin Theander, Rockford, Ill., tailor, and Jack Griffith, Fort Worth, Tex., tavern owner, but declared that the girl "had no part in any of them."

'Miss Dixie'

At the Memphis, Tenn., annual Cotton Carnival, pretty 16-year-old Ann Taylor was chosen "Miss Dixie" in the beauty contest.

King's Little Daughters Applaud Their Pictures

Windsor, England, May 17 (AP).—The little Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose applauded their own screen appearance tonight. They clapped their hands in delight when they saw themselves in a coronation film shown by their parents, the king and queen, in the throne room of the castle.

Their majesties motored from Royal Lodge especially t osee the coronation pictures, which lasted two hours. The royal family will return to London tomorrow.

Canadian Quads All Die; Two Live But 9 Hours

Montreal, May 17 (Canadian Press).—All of the quadruplets born last night to Mrs. Paul Martel died today at St. Justine Hospital. Two of the infants, a boy and the only girl, lived about nine hours; the others died later today.

State's Witness Confesses Theft, Clears 3 on Trial

Detroit, May 17 (AP).—The trial of three men on a charge of jewel theft was interrupted today when a prosecution witness arose dramatically from the stand and declared: "They didn't do this job; I did and I'm willing to take the rap for it."

The witness was Joe Merabella, 24. On trial were Eddie Loesch, 32; George Herder, 22, and Mickey Austin, 24, occupants of an apartment in which $7,500 worth of stolen jewelry samples was found.

"I broke into a jewelry salesman's car," Merabella said, "and took the stuff to these guys' apartment. I didn't tell them where I got it. Why should I let them take the rap?"

Court was adjourned and charges against Merabella drawn up.

Iowa Woman Heads Mt. Vernon Board

Mrs. Horace Mann Towner, of Iowa, was named regent of the Mount Vernon Ladies Association yesterday. She succeeds Mrs. Alice H. Richards, of Maine, who died in October. Mrs. Towner, who has served as vice regent from Iowa since 1913, is the wife of former Gen. Towner, of Puerto Rico.

Gov. George C. Peery of Virginia, accompanied by Mrs. Peery and members of the board of visitors, will visit Mount Vernon tomorrow afternoon, when a tour of inspection will be made on behalf of the State.

Members of the board of visitors include William A. Smoot, of Alexandria, Va.; Norman Call, of Richmond, Va.; Roswell Page, of Beaver Dam, Va.; Archibald McCrae, of Carters Grove, Va., and Gen. William H. Cocke, of Claremont-on-the-James.

Circus Sued for $10,000 By Washington Woman

Damages of $10,000 were sought of the Ringling Bros.-Barnum & Bailey Circus in District Court yesterday because of alleged injuries suffered by Mrs. Gladys A. Davie, 3403 Eastern avenue northeast, when a portion of the tent covering the circus was torn in a wind and rainstorm here a year ago.

Mrs. Davis claimed she suffered injuries to her foot and that the circus authorities were negligent in erection of the "big top." Attorney Dorsey K. Offutt filed the suit for her.

70 Japanese Die When Excursion Boat Blows Up

Hongkong, May 17 (AP).—Seventy Japanese emigrants were killed tonight by a boiler explosion aboard a launch. Eighteen persons were sent to hospitals. Twenty were missing.

The blast occurred as the launch shoved off from Queens pier to return the sight-seeing excursion of emigrants to their ship, the Rio de Janiero Maru. The Japanese were bound for South America.

Parts of bodies fell a quarter mile away; some landed on roof tops, some on the veranda of the Hangkong Club.

A number of Chinese in small boats were believed also to have died from the force of the explosion but the reports were not confirmed.

So terrific and sudden was the blast that many first thought it an earthquake. The launch disappeared with the explosion.

Pope Is Ordered To End Audiences

Castel Gandolfo, Italy, May 17 (U.P.) Pope Pius XI's physician tonight ordered the aged pontiff to cancel all audiences until Wednesday at least, because of a serious relapse in his condition which forced him to return to his wheel chair.

Prof. Aminta Milani, the physician, hurried to the papal summer palace here after learning of the holy father's erratic heart action, troubled breathing and recurrence of varicose veins.

He warned the pope, who will be 80 years old May 31, that he must submit to "a much-needed rest," if he is to regain his strength.

Legal Stamp Tax To Begin June 2

Annapolis, Md., May 17 (AP).—Attorneys and others recording legal papers in Maryland courts after June 1 will be required to purchase and attach stamps as a recordation tax, under plans made today by William S. Gordy, jr., State comptroller.

The special session of the Legislature, as part of the relief revenue raising program, levied a tax of 10 cents a $100 value of every paper recorded in the courts.

The tax applies to mechanics' liens, deeds, mortgages, except purchase money mortgages; chattel mortgages, bills of sale, conditional contracts of sale, leases, confessed judgments, magistrates' judgements, crop liens, deeds of trust and all other written instrumments which create liens on real or personal property.

Hastings Succeeds Buck.

Dover, Del., May 17 (AP).—Former United States Senator Daniel O. Hastings, of Wilmington, was named today to the National Republican Committee to succeed former Gov. C. Douglass Buck, who resigned recently, saying he wanted to devote more time to his business.

Shippers Back Carriers.

Organized shippers of the country joined in backing the carriers in opposition to a group of Congressional bills introduced on behalf of rail labor, centering immediate fire on the McCarran bill, now on the Senate calendar, to restrict freight trains to a length of 70 cars.

A total of about $140,000,000, it is estimated, will be returned in the pension tax refunds over the Nation, half of the sum to the carriers and half to the workers. The substitute act, sponsored by Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee, provides that all the tax collected up to January 1 of this year shall be returned. Since that date the tax rate is set at 2¾ per cent of the pay roll, deducted from workers' pay, with the carriers contributing an equal amount. Under the old law the rate was 3½ per cent. The new act calls for the refund, also, of the amounts collected since the start of the year in excess of the new rate of 2¾ per cent. It is estimated that $100,000,000 thus will be returned to both carriers and employes, up to January 1, with an additional $40,000,000 accruing since that time in excess of the new tax rate.

About $65 Per Man.

The refunds, it is estimated in railroad circles, will average close to $65 per man, with some 2,500 men in rail employment in the Capital area eligible.

Railroad union executives have asked that the wage-demand conference with the roads open not later than June 1. They seek the increased pay, retroactive to April 16, along with a guarantee of full-time wages to all regularly assigned employes and a guarantee of two-thirds pay to all "stand-by" employes.

The 14 unions are in addition to the five engine, train and yard service unions which had made previous demands for similar pay increases.

On the ground that increases in operating costs of the railroads ultimately will have to be paid by the shipping public, the National Industrial Traffic League, representing the country's shipping interests, has opened fire on 15 bills pending in Congress and designed to aid railroad workers.

"Passage of the program of legislation being pressed in this country by railway labor unions would increase the operating expenses of railroads by considerably more than $1,000,000,000 a year, without adding anything to the service, safety, efficiency or revenues of railroads," the League said.

To Fight Train Limit.

Immediate action is contemplated by the League against the bill by Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, limiting freight trains to 70 cars. The bill has been recommended favorably by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee. Three similar train-length measures are pending in House and Senate committees.

Providing for the six-hour day for rail workers are two bills, authored by Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, and Representative Crosser (Democrat) Ohio.

The League contends that with present divisions arranged on the basis of the eight-hour day, train workers still would be required to work eight hours but would draw time and one-half for all above six hours.

Two full crew bills have been introduced by Senator Neeley (Democrat), West Virginia, and Representative Griswold (Democrat), Indiana. Lacey, calling them "excess crew bills" declares they would not increase safety of the roads, but would cost $83,000,000 a year.

New hours of service limits are called for in measures sopsored by Senator Neely and Representative John A. Martin (Democrat), of Colorado. They would amend the present hours of service act by reducing the present 16-hour limit in train service to 12 hours, and the 9-hour limit for dispatchers to 6 hours.

Hearing Residents' Views on Daylight Time

Lie-Down Strike Threatened Against Daylight Time Bill

dent of the Motion Picture Theater Owners Association, complained experience had shown that the lengthening of daylight play time is hard on the movies.

"It also hurts attendance at the churches and schools," he added.

Miss Lucy B. Spencer, though a resident of Washington, spoke feelingly for the commuters and the nearby farmers.

"I also speak for the cows," she said. "Two changes of schedules for them a year upsets their digestion."

W. K. Forrest, general manager of the District Grocery Stores Association, said the D. G. S. grocers want to go along with the public, but he said daylight-saving time would be hard on those who open up the stores and might result in delayed deliveries of fresh vegetables by the farmers.

Jesse Suter, of the Federation of Citizens Association, pooh-poohed the bugaboos of loss of sleep, confused working schedules and the like, and expressed the opinion most of the difficulties suggested are "imaginary."

Hot "For 24 Hours."

As for the argument that one can't go to sleep until midnight or later during the summer on account of the heat, he remarked:

"I've lived here for 65 years, and when it's really hot here, it's hot for 24 hours, and it doesn't matter when you go to bed."

Washington trade organizations reported approval of the bill through W. H. Press, of the Board of Trade, and Richard J. Murphy, of the Washington Automotive Trade Association.

Two members of the House District Committee, Representatives Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, and Arnold (Republican), of Illinois, took the lead in opposing the bill by presenting a series of witnesses.

Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, also registered his objection on behalf of residents of Alexandria and Arlington county.

The point of view of the housewives was vigorously explained by Mrs. Leslie Wright, secretary of the Forest Hills Citizens Association.

"I don't see why men should get out an hour earlier to play golf," she said. "I wish some of them would have to get dinner in Washington when it's hot—then they wouldn't want daylight - saving time."

Letters From Radio Poll.

The majority of the letters indorsing the Sacks bill were submitted by Gordon Hittenmark, of Station WRC, which has been soliciting ballots on the question.

He said that 8,432 of the 9,328 votes received by the station were for daylight-saving time.

Chairman Sacks at the same time stated he had received 3,000 letters favoring the change in time schedule and 900 opposing it.

A. C. Hayden, of Local 161 of the American Federation of Musicians, told the committee he believed "a preponderance of sentiment" among District residents is favorable to the bill.

The change in sleeping and eating schedules, Dr. F. W. Buck warned, might upset the community health.

Speaking for the youth of the city, William G. Hamilton, of the Order of DeMolay, indorsed the bill. He said young people need the extra hour for recreational and social activities.

The plight of Government employes who now go to work at 8:30 a. m., in accordance with the staggered traffic plan, was brought to the attention of the sub-committee by several witnesses.

Jury Told Parker Dictated Confession

Newark, N. J., May 17 (AP).—A Federal court jury trying Ellis H. Parker and his son on conspiracy charges growing out of the alleged seizure and torture of Paul H. Wendel was told today that Detective Parker himself dictated various changes to be made in Wendel's first "confession" to the Lindbergh baby kidnaping.

The testimony came from an admitted participant in the alleged plot, 28-year-old Murray Bleefeld. The senior Parker, he asserted, read the "confession" or parts of it several times, directed changes that Wendel should make and finally gave his tentative "stamp of approval."

Naval Affairs Unit To Inspect Hospital

Members of the House Naval Affairs Committee tomorrow will inspect the Naval Hospital to ascertain the needs for a new institution as proposed in a bill introduced by Chairman Vinson.

Surgeon General Percival S. Rossiter, of the Navy Department, was the only witness at yesterday's hearing on the bill. He declared that the present hospital is inadequate and the site is not large enough to rebuild on.

He also pointed out that the present side is noisy because of nearby thoroughfares and airplane routes.

Hot Shoppes Host To 400 Employes

The Hot Shoppes, Inc., was host to nearly 400 employes at Glen Echo Park yesterday. J. W. Marriott, president; P. M. Marriott, vice president, and John Daniel, secretary and treasurer, attended.

The day was started out with racing and competitions as follows: Three-legged race for girls, won by Mrs. Vincent; three-legged race for girls, won by Josephine Walker and Dot Fox; potato race for boys, won by R. Kastner; three-legged race for boys, won by S. Kastner and Mark Watson; potato race for girls, won by Nelia Morris; managers race, won by M. L. Dellinger, and curb managers race, won by Dick Gentry. Prizes were awarded to the winners.

Charlottesville, Va., May 17 (AP).—Dr. John Lloyd Newcomb, president of the University of Virginia, announced today the appointment of Dr. James Southall Wilson to be dean of the department of graduate studies.

3 Police Heroes to Receive Medals for Bravery Today

Three members of the Metropolitan Police Force will be awarded medals for valor by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen at a luncheon today at the Mayflower Hotel.

The policemen are Detective Sergt. Earl E. Baker, Private Robert Talbert and Private William P. Doran. Baker will receive a gold medal, Talbert a silver medal and Doran a bronze bar.

In the certificate of award Baker was cited "for meritorious service in connection with his action in a hold-up at the Blue Bell lunchroom, 2335 Bladensburg road northeast at 12:30 a. m., October 13, 1935, in which the officer displayed unusual courage and exposed himself to danger to safeguard other persons in the lunchroom."

The citation for Talbert was: "Private Robert Talbert, of the Sixth Precinct was awarded a silver medal for his actions in disarming Charles Hisey, who had shot a woman at 414 Rittenhouse street northwest at 8:25 a. m., August 20, 1935. The officer was shot in the right forearm. Notwithstanding, he grappled with his assailant and disarmed him. This act of Private Taylor's involved extreme personal risk."

Doran, also of the Sixth Precinct, was officially cited for valor "for his act in placing under arrest three men whom he observed crossing the street at Georgia avenue near Sheridan street northwest at 1:45 a. m., January 23, 1936."

But who will provide the Cornerstone for your Castles-in-the-air?

PROBABLY you, like everyone else, have your castles-in-the-air. Dreams of security. Dreams of leisure.

Anyone can dream dreams, to be sure. But there is a man right here in town whose business it is to make dreams a reality—to provide cornerstones for castles-in-the-air. He is doing it—every day!

Thanks to him, a work-weary man is closing his desk for the last time. Now carefree years are his to enjoy.

Thanks to him, a boy whose father is no longer here, will stride proudly across a platform in June to receive a college diploma.

Thanks to him, a young widowed mother and her three small children are facing the future unafraid, because they have a regular monthly income.

Who is this man? Some call him a life insurance salesman. But millions of Americans know him as the man who helps to make dreams come true!

No matter what your hopes for the future may be . . . no matter how modest your present income—this man can show you how to start a life insurance plan—how to make your hope of security, for yourself and those you love, a living reality!

WHO BENEFITS FROM AMERICA'S LIFE INSURANCE?

Since the end of 1929, American life insurance companies have paid to policyholders and beneficiaries over $18,000,000,000—enough, for example, to provide an income of $150 a month to more than a million families for 10 years.

In 1936 Alone, the amount paid out was $2,400,000,000.

Upsetting the Old Idea that "you have to die to win," $1,460,000,000—more than 60% of the total amount—went to living policyholders.

This Year, payments to both policyholders and beneficiaries are being made at the rate of more than A QUARTER OF A MILLION DOLLARS every hour of every day.

Du Pont Admits 'Cross-Sales' With Raskob

Denies, However, He Fixed Arbitrary Values on Securities.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 17.—Pierre S. du Pont, summoned as a witness by the Government in its 1929 income tax case against him and John J. Raskob, frankly testified today he made cross-sales of securities with Raskob after the Wall Street panic to establish losses which he could deduct from his income tax return.

The elderly chairman of the board of the chemical and munitions company bearing his family name time and again denied, however, that he and his one-time secretary and business associate for many years placed arbitrary values on the securities sold back and forth.

Mason B. Leming, chief of Government counsel, asked du Pont on several occasions if these sales were discussed beforehand with attorneys.

"No," replied du Pont to each question.

Surprise Move by U. S.

Leming's call of du Pont to the witness stand came as a surprise move, just as it seemed the Government was going to rest its case. The Government attorney was taking no chance that du Pont's own counsel, James S. Y. Ivins, might rest on the Government's record without calling the Wilmington industrialist.

Leming and du Pont traced through the cross-sales, the first of which was on November 13, 1929, and the second on the following December 26, by which du Pont and Raskob established losses, in comparison with pre-panic values of more than $7,000,000.

The Government, contending the sales were fictitious and were made with an illegal repurchasing understanding whereby neither would lose anything in the transactions, seeks $617,316 deficiency tax for the year from duPont and $1,026,340 from Raskob.

Du Pont paid a tax of $4,563,988 in that year and Raskob paid $1,183,334.

Leming sought to show that the two multimillionaires fixed arbitrary values on the stocks they sold, so the checks they exchanged would come out fairly even.

Exchanged $4,000,000 Checks.

In the November 13 cross-sale, du Pont gave Raskob a check for $4,606,000 for a block of securities and Raskob gave his check for $4,582,750 for the stocks he purchased from du Pont.

It was shown that the stocks sold by du Pont were based on the closing price of the market that day and those sold by Raskob were based on the day's low.

Leming handed Du Pont a pad and pencil and asked him to figure the difference between the two checks. Du Pont figured it at $23,250.

"Now I ask you to figure," Leming asked, "what it would have been if you had sold also at the low of the day?"

Du Pont figured some more on the pad and replied:

"It would have been around $150,000."

Leming then asked:

"Is it customary to sit down after the close of the market and say I'll take some at that price and some at this price?"

"I don't know whether it's customary or not," du Pont replied. "But I don't know of any law prohibiting it."

Woman, 40, Dies Of Gunshot Wound

Mrs. Paul Hagenbuck, 40, died in Casualty Hospital yesterday of a gunshot wound in her chest. She was the wife of a Navy Department draftsman.

Mrs. Hagenbuck was found in a wooded section near her home in Edmonston, Md., Saturday night after her husband returned from work and discovered her absence. He told police she had threatened to shoot herself.

Police said a .32-caliber revolver was found nearby. Mrs. Hagenbuck had been in ill health, her husband said.

Oil Wages in Mexico Raised to Avert Strike

Mexico City, May 17 (AP).—Mexico's oil industry offered its workers wage increases totaling $2,000,000 annually today and waited to see whether the move would avert a threatened walkout May 27.

May 27 will mark the end of a 120-day period decreed by President Lazaro Cardenas for discussion of blanket labor contract demands made by the labor syndicate for the industry's 18,000 workers. Conferees agreed it would be impossible to finish the work in the ten days left.

"My SKIN now invites a close-up"

"—how well I recall the days and long evenings when I felt tired-out and looked it."

A SKIN that glows naturally bespeaks radiant health beneath... it is alive... stays fresh! So, be good to your skin from within and it will be good to you.

The reason for this is quite simple... skin tissues must have an abundance of red-blood-cells to aid in making the skin glow... to bring color to your cheeks... to build resistance to germ attacks.

It is so easy for these precious red-blood-cells to lose their vitality. Worry, overwork and undue strain take their toll. Sickness literally burns them up. Improper diet retards the development of new cells. Even a common cold kills them in great numbers.

Science, through S.S.S. Tonic, brings to you the means to regain this blood strength within a short space of time... the action of S.S.S. is cumulative and lasting.

Moreover, S.S.S. Tonic whets the appetite. Foods taste better... natural digestive juices are stimulated and finally the very food you eat is of more value. A very important step back to health.

You, too, will want to take S.S.S. Tonic to regain and to maintain your red-blood-cells... to restore lost weight... to regain energy... to strengthen nerves... and to give to your skin that natural health glow.

Take the S.S.S. Tonic treatment and shortly you should be delighted with the way you feel... and have your friends compliment you on the way you look.

S.S.S Tonic is especially designed to build sturdy health by restoring deficient red-blood-cells and it is time-tried and scientifically proven.

At all drug stores in two convenient sizes. The large size at a saving in price. There is no substitute for this time tested remedy. No ethical druggist will suggest something "just as good."

Woman Convicted In Jenkins' Death

Deliberating four hours, a jury in District Court yesterday found Mrs. Anna Marie Sanford guilty of manslaughter in connection with the death of William Jenkins, 49, retired District fireman, who died from loss of blood last September in a Southeast rooming house.

Previously, Justice Jesse C. Adkins had ordered the jury to return a not guilty verdict as to Edna Weaver, a roomer, indicted with Mrs. Sanford, proprietor of the rooming house.

Jenkins, it was shown, suffered two wounds in his leg. From them enough blood was lost to leave him in a weakened condition when he was found. He was retired from the fire department several years ago because of disability.

The Windfall Tax Decision.

The decision of the Supreme Court upholding the so-called windfall tax is interesting chiefly because it adds another shred of evidence indicating that the court is not trying to sabotage the New Deal.

Invalidation of the AAA nearly a year and a half ago left the status of processing taxes under that act in a most confused situation. In many cases those taxes had been passed on to consumers. It would have been manifestly unfair to have permitted processors to retain funds which they had collected from the public as taxes but which they had failed to turn over to the Government.

Congress passed a law for the purpose of recapturing these funds, except in cases where processors could prove that they did not pass the tax on to the consumer. Provision was made for fair hearings of all claims and for the protection of legal rights. Consequently, the court which upset the AAA now refuses to interfere with the enforcement of the windfall tax law.

In the Alabama Power Company case the court refused to pass upon the constitutionality of the TVA because that issue was not directly involved in the suit. The decision in the arms embargo case, the five recent opinions involving constitutionality of the Wagner labor relations act and various other decisions serve to illustrate the court's objectivity. If any credence is still placed in the charge that the court is "packed" against the New Deal, this current decision will further dispel it.

The Unicameral Legislature.

Nebraska's nonpartisan, unicameral Legislature, the first of its kind in the country, has just ended its initial session. Opinion in Lincoln seems agreed that Senator George Norris' experiment has proven "good but not sensational."

The assembly of 43 lawmakers passed more bills in less time and at less expense than the preceding bicameral assembly. The faster action followed principally from the fact that standing committees were reduced from 31 to 13 and sessions were so scheduled that every member found himself called to only one meeting every legislative day. To minimize steam-roller tendencies that might have resulted from this increased speed of action, five days' advance public notice were required on all hearings. These hearings were generally well attended by citizens, and even executive sessions were kept under the public eye by admitting representatives of the press.

The session was notable for its open-faced behavior. The rules permitted a single member to force a record vote on any motion during any stage of procedure. While this tended to hold members to campaign promises, it also emphasized sectional lines and compromises between rural and metropolitan legislators were made difficult. These sectional divisions, on the other hand, gave the lobbyists a headache, for they were unable to concentrate their attentions upon a few leaders. The nonpolitical character of the Legislature, of course, also eliminated easily approachable "party whips" from the scene. Lobbies, however, have by no means vanished from Lincoln.

The most widely advertised bill of the session, a proposal to legalize mercy deaths, expired in committee. The assembly also refused to ratify the child labor amendment. A proposed amendment to the State constitution for extensive administrative changes was submitted to the people, however, and an unemployment insurance bill was passed. As for relief, the burden of its cost was thrown back on the counties. And the last action of the Legislature was to approve the largest appropriation bill in the State's history, increasing the Governor's budget by $5,000,000.

The unicameral experiment, in its first but scarcely conclusive test, showed itself to be far from the ideal, nonpolitical and consistently liberal body its proponents had visualized. Most legislators, regardless of organization, are still men of prejudice and frailty. This is not to say that the unicameral system has failed. It is rather that it has not been able to avoid entirely the faults of bicameral assemblies. Perhaps next year, with the same membership returning to Lincoln, the virtues can be further advanced and the faults more effectively diminished.

Reviving An Important Issue.

Although more than four months have elapsed since the Brownlow committee issued its report on reorganization of the Government's administrative agencies, the joint Congressional reorganization committee has made virtually no progress in translating it into legislation. The pushing aside of this important legislative chore is a conspicuous example of the way in which the President's plan to pack the Supreme Court has absorbed the attention of Congress and engrossed public interest to the exclusion of many vital problems.

Another obstacle to progress has been the ill-advised attempt to incorporate all of the Brownlow committee's chief recommendations into an omnibus bill. Even if Congress had been eager to get ahead with the reorganization program, this all-embracing draft measure would not have afforded any basis for intelligent discussion or discriminating action. In fact, it has offered an excellent excuse for delay.

The Administration is wisely attempting to rescue the reorganization program from oblivion by substituting four separate bills, for this unofficial omnibus measure pigeonholed by the joint committee. One of these bills would give the President power to reorganize, transfer, consolidate and abolish executive boards and agencies. Presumably the plan for bringing the independent commissions under executive control, insofar as their purely administrative functions are concerned, would be a part of this proposal.

The second bill would extend the Civil Service; the third would reorganize the General Accounting Office and abolish the office of Comptroller General. The fourth, it is surmised, would authorize the creation of two new executive departments and the appointment of six Presidential assistants.

The proposal to extend the scope of the Civil Service rules and regulations to cover all but policy-making positions is the least controversial of all the recommendations. Anybody who is sincerely eager to elevate standards of efficiency realizes the handicap imposed by the spoils system, and the importance of making merit the sole test of fitness for office. There are differences of opinion as to the way in which the needed reform should be effected and as to the desirability of substituting a single head for the present Civil Service Commission. But the soundness of the principle on which this proposal rests is not open to question.

It is quite different, however, in case of the proposed subordination of the present independent boards and commissions. To be sure, Congress has followed no consistent policy in creating these independent agencies and lately there has been a tendency to multiply them over-rapidly. But it does not follow that governmental affairs would be better administered by stripping the ICC, the FTC, the Tariff Commission, the SEC and similar bodies of their independent status. They are now protected against executive interference that might seriously impair their usefulness. Congress certainly ought not to vest in the President vast discretionary powers of reorganizing executive agencies without throwing safeguards around these important regulatory bodies.

The proposal to abolish the office of Comptroller General is also one that has aroused grave misgivings. The Brownlow committee has undoubtedly presented a strong case in theory against the independence of the General Accounting Office. Current direction of spending the current budgetary control, it asserts, are essential executive functions and the major responsibility should be vested in the President without hampering restrictions. Exception may be taken to this view, however, even on theoretical grounds. And in view of the Administration's spending record, there is a great deal to be said against abolishing independent checks upon executive discretion.

Intelligent legislative handling of the reorganization program calls for unhurried study and analysis of every major recommendation. There would be little purpose in splitting up the legislative program if Congress thereafter should refuse to devote sufficient time to discussion of the several parts of the plan. Certainly it ought not hastily to grant the President extensive powers which might be used to effect a revolutionary transformation in the executive branch of Government.

A Record Federal Pay Roll.

On April 1 the Federal Government had over 829,000 persons on its pay roll, exclusive of the legislative, judicial and military branches. This figure, moreover, is exclusive of relief workers and young men enrolled in the CCC. Yet it is the highest total recorded in any peace-time period and less than 100,000 below the war-time maximum. It is worth noting that only a small percentage of the 257,000 persons who have been added to the pay roll since the end of June, 1933, are subject to Civil Service rules, whereas, non-Civil Service workers have increased by 180 per cent during the past four years.

Since the cost of carrying on the Government is determined chiefly by the size of the pay roll, any effective retrenchment necessarily requires dismissal of non-essential workers, assuming that salaries are not to be cut. Drastic reductions in the administrative personnel of the WPA, for instance, are stated to be in contemplation, even on the basis of an estimated relief appropriation of $1,500,000,000.

This is the inevitable painful aftermath of governmental extravagance. The personal hardships entailed by dismissal enlist deserved sympathy and tend to strengthen political pressure to keep employment lists at the peak point. Yet economies cannot be reasonably effected without cutting pay rolls that are responsible for budgetary deficits.

There is one gleam of comfort to be extracted from the pay roll records. That is the knowledge that those to be dismissed will come chiefly from the newly established emergency services. These employes have known from the beginning that their positions are temporary. That was the argument used to excuse the Congressional habit of exempting them from the Civil Service regulations. Thus economy will go hand in hand with a reduction in the untrained and often inexperienced workers.

Nationalizing British Coal.

In an effort to cure ailments that have long afflicted the British coal industry, the Baldwin government has decided to employ drastic remedies. The first of these is the purchase by the government of the coal deposits now in private hands. Once this has been accomplished, the way will be paved for the compulsory amalgamation of existing collieries with the aim of rationalizing the industry.

At first glance it may seem queer that a Conservative government should be venturing on a path so patently socialistic.

Had such a move been made by a Labor government it would have "been harried to death for Socialist expropriation," as one wirter pointed out. Yet in pursuing such a course the Baldwin cabinet is neither rash nor particularly radical.

The nationalization of coal royalties comes after more than 60 years of agitation against the dual system of ownership which prevails in the British coal mining industry. That step has been urged by more than one royal commission. Indeed, without taking over the nation's coal deposits, the government would continue to be hamstrung in its efforts to overhaul the thoroughly depressed coal industry upon which hundreds of thousands of British workers and their families depend for a livelihood.

Under British law, as in the United States, the owner of land possesses everything on it, above it and below it to the very center of the earth. But, in contrast to the general American practice, the British landowner has a right to draw a distinction between the surface and the subsoil, and can lease or sell either independently of the other.

Thus, while some 4,000 individuals in Great Britain own the coal deposits, these same individuals do not necessarily own or operate the mines. In general they do not. The mines are usually owned by individuals or companies that have leased for a period of years the right to dig coal in return for the payment of annual rents or royalties.

This duality of ownership has always caused trouble. While the royalties are fixed, the price of coal has fluctuated, with the prevailing trend in Great Britain being downward during recent years. Faced by the necessity of meeting large overhead costs in the form of royalties, the colliery operators have not infrequently been compelled to operate mines at a loss. This has encouraged overproduction. And the multiplicity of owners has brought about an uneconomic increase in the number of mines.

Until recently the unwillingness of the coal owners to give up a lucrative source of revenue, putting almost $25,000,000 into their pockets each year, had been an insuperable obstacle to nationalization of these royalties. As a result of an aroused public opinion and persistent governmental pressure, however, the Miperal Owners Joint Committee, representing the owners, agreed to the establishment of an arbitral tribunal to fix the sum by which they were to be reimbursed for their holdings. Their own minimum figure was approximately $560,000,000. To their consternation the tribunal returned a verdict declaring that $322,250,000 would be sufficient compensation.

When this deal goes through, as it soon will, the British nation itself will own the unmined coal of the kingdom. It is interesting to note, however, that the mining industry will not be nationalized. This is what the British Laborites have been demanding. But the Baldwin government has refused to consider any such action. It will not hesitate to use the lever of coal ownership to bring order out of chaos in the mining, distribution and sale of coal. But the industry will remain in private hands as heretofore.

The new neutrality act was approved a few days ago, and recent appropriations to the Army constitute a peace-time record. It costs a lot to prepare for a war we're determined not to fight.

As a person grows older, almost everything about him becomes less elastic except his conscience.

The Neutrality Law.

From the Christian Science Monitor.

With all its defects, the neutrality law seems to be a step ahead. It would be better if there were a functioning system of peace machinery with which the United States could co-operate in preventing war. And nobody should get the idea that the new law is an absolute preventive of American involvement in war. But the peace machinery is today rusting away. The United States bears its share of blame for this dangerous situation.

Temporary Employe's Plea.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am one of a large number of Government workers holding temporary jobs in the Department of Labor. Having no civil service rating I shall probably be one of many who will be "let go" on June 30, and being over 45, I will undoubtedly experience difficulty, if not utter failure, in finding employment in private industry. As I have a wife and five children who already have had more than their share of "making the best of hard times," I do not look with a great deal of pleasure on the dark days that will follow June.

Since I have been with the Labor Department I have applied myself diligently to the work of the office and believe that I have attained a degree of efficiency justifying the salary I receive. An inexperienced civil service employe takng over my job could not possibly learn the special routine detail in less than three months. The work, as such, is not difficult, but requres experience.

There has been much talk of "blanketing" temporary workers into the regular civil service. The ideas sown may or may not develop into a publicly announced policy. Nevertheless, by one means or another, there will be instances wherein certain worthy temporary employes will find themselves shifted over into the regular civil service ranks. This, I think, will be as it should be. The merit system, in these instances, will recognize merit as willingness and ability to do the job at hand.

May I not suggest that in the shifting, those in power give serious consideration to cases like my own wherein employes, though no longer young, still have the responsibility of providing for growing families? Our families must live; our children must go to school. Because we are the breadwinners, if we are thrown out of work and find no other employment, our families will be dependent on charity. Is this economy? Is it economy to take a job from a person who needs the work, is willing to work, and can do the work and make of that person a nonearner whom city, State, or Federal Government eventually must support?

There is no more pathetic sight than that of the middleaged head of a family who, though considered too old to be given a job, yet feels too young and is too ambitious to want to quit. C. J. B.

HOLC And FHA Merger.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your issue of May 11 contained "Observer's" observations that the basis upon which you questioned the financial benefits predicted in the proposed merger of HOLC and FHA is unsound.

We do not know what Senator Byrd contemplates. We do know and appreciate what he accomplished when he reorganized the system for the Commonwealth of Virginia from top to bottom.

We do not know of any valid reason why HOLC and FHA should not be merged. We appreciate that both were to have been temporary or emergency agencies and that they have dual roles and competitive functions, while other activities are corelated.

Most people know that HOLC and FHA were set up to serve the common needs of home owners and of housing. Fewer people appreciate that instead of temporary measures, these administrations will be with us for many years to come. Housing and home ownership are more than bureaucratic domination can hope to control as time passes. The thinking and effective Federal employe has nothing to fear in the long run. Job loss concerns most of us. A NORTH RIDGER.

Conflicting Farmer-Labor Interests.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In his letter appearing in your columns of May 11, "Aristotle" either fails to grasp the import of his pointed remarks, or else he writes with his tongue in his cheek. He violates elementary logic when, after correctly exposing the contradictory patchwork of the New Deal as an utterly futile attempt to deal "with effects, not causes," he flatly springs on us as a solution to capitalism's dilemma the most irreconcilable contradiction of them all—the Farmer-Labor movement.

All of us know that the farmer produces or hires agricultural workers to produce for him commodities which he sells on the market as his own. Not so with labor—the other half of this strange political concoction. Labor does not own the products it produces because it produces them on or with the aid of a productive mechanism which it does not legally own. The worker sells to the industrial or agricultural employer the only thing he has to sell—his power to produce. The employer then retains for himself the greater part of what the worker produces.

Consequently, it follows that the interests of the farmer and the worker (industrial and agricultural) are diametrically opposed. We have living evidence of their irreconcilable interests cropping up daily, as witness the recent Hershey factory strike. The farmers in that area made a vicious attack upon the men and women workers who were in the plant striking for improved conditions of labor and brutally banged up many of the strikers. The farmers claimed that the workers by striking were depriving them of a large market for their milk.

We see, then, that the interests of the farmer, on the one hand, are definitely tied up with their private ownership of the land and the tools needed in the use of it. Farmers, both big and little, have a definite stake in maintaining the status quo in property relations.

A political party, therefore, in order to attract the farmer cannot challenge prevailing property rights. Its "radicalism" cannot go any further than the patching up of capitalism's weak spots, which patchwork our friend "Aristotle" so ably decries. The farmer's political interests, like those of all other capitalists, concern themselves with such matters as lower taxes, lower railroad charges, higher market prices for his produce, etc.

The interest of the workers, on the other hand, in response to their historic mission and the urgency of economic pressure, calls for the abolition of private ownership in the means of life, both industrial and agricultural, and the consequent substitution of the production for use motif for the prevailing profit motif in production.

For nearly a half-century this modern proletarian interest has been politically expressed in America by the Socialist Labor Party alone. It urges the workers to organize as they work (or have worked) into genuine socialist industrial unions with the purpose of taking over the means of production and running the whole works for their own social needs.

The workers are also taught that they must organize their political strength behind the Socialist Labor Party for the purpose of abolishing the political (i. e. territorial representative) form of government and setting up the Socialist Industrial form based on their organization in production.

This is socialism, the one hope for the propertyless workers of the land and is in utter opposition to the property interests of all the propertied elements. "DeLEONITE."

Washington, May 15.

Laws And Public Opinion.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Because the late William Graham Sumner started as a clergyman, became economist, then entered political life, he discovered that ideals and reform demand knowledge of the difference between the forces which make public opinion and the administration of the state. "The former," he discovered by wide observation, "are due to the effect of experience upon a people who have been long operating under an old and traditional formula. The administration of the state, however, rests upon artful regulation adapted to such changed mores. It cannot and must not attempt to thwart them."

It becomes obvious that discussions pro and con on the issue of the Federal judiciary range from one to the other of these phases of social organization, but without the grasp of the trained sociologist. Each side lacks the viewpoint of the other, and both seek to preserve regulations already discarded by the very hold of tradition outmoded.

Statesmen seem to overlook that the laws had to be changed basically, (1) at the birth of the Nation, (2) during its adolescene following a clash, (3) for its young-manhood as it spread over the frontier, and (4) must again be greatly modified to meet the call of its maturity. Laws do not make but follow public opinion, and every interpretation which retreats into generally outmoded mores or customs, creates an unbalanced state of society—a crisis, an emergency, or even civil war, dependent upon the size of the majority and the character of the dominant idea. The late Woodrow Wilson pointed out that we cannot continue 5 per cent corporate "persons" and 95 per cent individual citizens.

Fine leadership shows when resiliency as opposed to rigidity of management preserves the status quo and permits a forward movement simultaneously. Can America make the grade?

"Biggest Sinkhole."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please let me add my word of sincere thanks to The Post for its great public service in preventing the destruction of the Tidal Basin and surrounding cherry trees in the name of a memorial to Thomas Jefferson.

Citizens who followed the recent hearings on this subject before the Library Committee of the House earnestly hope, however, that The Post will not abate its vigilance without full assurance that this audacious scheme has been permanently killed, not merely temporarily averted, to be slipped over at some later time.

The conclusion seems to have become fairly obvious that the so-called Thomas Jefferson Memorial project in its proposed form was just one more scheme on the part of cement interests with influential political connections to sell the largest possible amount of their product at public expense and that this and this alone explains their determination to get the Tidal Basin for a site. It provided the biggest possible sink hole. THERESA H. RUSSELL.

The Abattoir.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some who object to the Benning abattoir ought to take a whiff of the aroma from the yeast plant on Bladensburg road, or walk through some of the alleys in the poorer sections of Northwest. As for health, children in Benning look as healthy as some in the swell apartments.

Senator Tydings knows that every one in Washington cannot get a Government job, and if the State quota program is carried out a steady job at the packing house would be welcome. Maryland and Virginia stock raisers would have a near market. Washington would get cheaper meat.

Some of the objectors live so far away from the plan that they won't see the stack. Nothing like keeping your own doorstep clean.

Spring Shower.

THE rain came suddenly, a driving rain, slanting through spring sunshine, beating on the pavement with an almost tropical intensity. The rain was like silver coins dissolving at the touch of hard reality. I stepped into a doorway and, leaning against an old brick wall, stared at the rain. The door behind me opened and a man stood with me in the narrow entry.

I saw that he was a large, vigorous man whose youth was long in the past. His face was brown, a kind of copper color, seamed by time and seasoned by all weathers. His eyes, I saw, were narrow and keen, but in them was no cunning, only a patient tiredness of long standing. He wore overalls of light blue, that looked as if they were fresh from a laundry tub; his coat was of the same material, and his hat, with its wide brim and high pointed crown, was made of soft, cream-colored felt. On the inside of his coat, around his neck, was a narrow strip of leather stitched in colored beads of glass. Then I looked down and saw that he wore moccasins on his feet.

I spoke to him.

"It's some rain, isn't it?"

He looked sharply at me, as if questioning my right to intrude upon the privacy of his thoughts. A moment of uncomfortable silence rose between us.

"Yes," he said.

But he did not step out into the rain. I wondered why. Was this a sign of weakness, or a mute testimonial of the progress of civilization? With what silent disapproval would these first Americans, who regarded the white man with such fierce distrust and hostility 300 years ago, look now upon one of their descendants waiting with serenity for an April shower to pass? This man was an Indian, and yet I asked myself: How does he feel about all this? Why is he here? Does he like being in a city, or does he revert inwardly to the feelings of his ancestors and consider the plains his home and the stars at night a roof over his head?

"You're a stranger here, aren't you?" I asked.

"Yes," he answered, speaking low.

"Do you like Washington?"

"It's as good as an city, I guess," he said. We were silent. So he did not wish to talk, he was preserving the silence and the taciturnity of his nature and his race. We looked into the rain. Then I had the feeling that he was regarding me without appearing to do so, that he was measuring me as if to determine for himself that my interest in him was sincere.

Unexpectedly I heard him say:

"Oklahoma, my home. Not like this, there. Cities different, land different." He spoke slowly, with a faint "Western" note in his tone and with child-like simplicity. "In Oklahoma people more free, more room, not have to touch elbows on street. I like that better. Even the rain there different from this rain. Hard rain there, and land wide, prairies in West. In summer creeks dry up, we have dust storms, cattle thirst. That I understand."

Then I asked him some questions which he answered slowly, speaking with a curious lack of verbs. He told me he had been born in the "Indian Territory" after the Civil War and that he was a "good-sized" boy before he had ever lived in a house. He was born out of doors, and was one of 14 children. Of his nine brothers only he and one other were living; his sisters had married, several of them had gone away with their husbands, and he did not know whether or not all of them still lived. He had learned to speak English as a youth simply by listening to it, and his own children had taught him to write a little. One of his daughters was, he said, a teacher in a mission school.

Before he was 20 he had traveled from the Gulf of Mexico to Canada and back again to Oklahoma. Most of this distance was covered on the back of a cow-pony, a little animal of which he spoke with bright memory and real affection. As he told of this trip he seemed to go back across the years, and the heavy motor traffic that moved through the rain in the street we faced did not exist for him.

There were two things I wanted to ask him and could find no way to do it. One was his tribe, the other his name. I had never talked with an Indian before, but one could not mistake the restraint and reserve in his face. These things were there and not to be ignored.

He did not speak of what had brought him to Washington more than to say he was here "to see the Government." He had no friends here, knew no one. Looking at him, I wondered what his thoughts were of this city that was his Capital as well as mine. Did he like it, or did he resent its being? Was it right that he, one of the first Americans, should feel himself an alien in the land that had belonged to his forebears? I could not answer that.

Suddenly he turned and looked at me. His eyes were quizzical, as though he had just brought himself out of the past to realize that he had been talking with a stranger. Before I could speak he stepped into the rain and, like the silver coins dissolving at the touch of hard reality, was gone.

Let Them Have It.

THIS IS one of my liberal days, and in that mood I have to admit that one of the principal arguments against dog racing is no argument at all. I refer to the contention that the dog tracks entice the poor and absorb money which otherwise might be spent for milk, meat and clothing.

It is true that the casual and intimate atmosphere of the dog tracks attracts a class of people who somehow feel outclassed and unwelcome at the horse rings. It is true also that the dog tracks operate at night, when people with working-class jobs and women with household responsibilities have time to take the air and gamble, whereas the horse plants do business only in the afternoon.

I will grant that fakery is a little more rife and ribald, if that is possible, in dog racing than in horse racing and that certain of the dog people have the reputation of being more intimately connected with the underworld of crime.

However, the horse people should have the decency to blush prettily when they decry the presence of racketeers in the dog business, because everybody in the sport industry knows that certain horse tracks are owned and operated by felonious characters whose entire careers have been routed outside the law and that notorious crooks are allowed to run stables in the names of relatives.

• • • •

AND EVERY community which has been host to a horse track knows that race meetings, even of the best, attract swindlers, pickpockets and free-style thieves in large numbers.

The matter with which I quarrel is the assumption that the working stiff and his wife have not the same right to throw away their money that other people have and needed big-brothering from a class of citizens who are held to be superior, including the grocer and the installment man.

The same thought is apparent in the crusade against the burlesque show, which differs from the restaurant hide show only in the price of admission. Burlesque is the poor man's meat opera, and I would not argue that he goes there to think about the state of his soul or listen to the repartee of the degenerate comedians. He goes to burlesque to ogle the naked women and give himself up to yearning which his pastor would call base, but that is precisely why the dress-up trade goes to precisely the same exhibitions in the expensive glamour plants which have not been officially molested.

It never has been shown that the poor man is any less able to control his conduct after a burlesque show than a big spender after a night at the ringside, and judging by the divorce rate among our betters I take it that these restaurant entertainments give people unchaste ideas, even though they go in silks and satins, as the old song said.

If a poor man likes to watch the dogs run at night that should be his privilege as long as wealthier people are allowed to watch the horses go. If he wants to bet on the dogs in the same way that others bet on the steeds, that should be his privilege, too, and the interests of the tradesmen who clamor a sort of prior lien on his earnings are of no importance, for many superior citizens also frivol away money on the horses which, by the same reasoning, should be earmarked for their creditors.

• • • •

THE OWNERS of motion-picture theaters, the merchants and others who deplore dog racing because it diverts people's money to the mutuel booths have no legitimate voice in the question.

If you argue that the dog tracks should be rigidly supervised and heavily taxed you are on different ground, for they handle millions of dollars and the practice of taxing gambling is accepted wherever racing is allowed except in New York and New Orleans. However, it would be better to turn over this study to the State banking officials rather than to racing commissions, which often are free-and-easy political bodies, subject to hidden influences and pulled about by personal interests.

Now that many communities have compromised their principles, waiving a little morality for the sake of the revenue, it is wrong to discriminate against the dogs in favor of the horses, for no man can prove that a horse race is better entertainment or necessarily any more honest. In fact, the opposition to the dogs almost invariably rests on the contention that the poor man can't afford his losings, which is true but immaterial.

Nobody at a horse park is required to give a financial statement and prove that he can stand a loss as a prior condition to a bet.

Mr. LaGuardia, of New York, has unwittingly indorsed the principle that it's the rich what gets the pleasure and the poor what takes the blame.

The Twitchells On Pay For Wives.

("Mrs. Roosevelt said that wives who stay home and maintain the household should be paid weekly salaries."—News item.)

Mrs. Twitchell—I see where Mrs. Roosevelt says wives who stay home and maintain a household should be paid regularly every week by their husbands.

Elmer—Yeah? How would she know about that?

Mrs. Twitchell—Don't be sarcastic. She says keeping a home is a job like anything else.

Elmer—The President has got the men of this country full of strange notions and now Mrs. Roosevelt is starting the women off.

Mrs. Twitchell—What's the difference between keeping house and working in a shop, anyhow?

Elmer—You wouldn't know; you've never done either.

Mrs. Twitchell—I tell you I'm a slave. You have no idea of the work that has to be done to keep this house looking right.

Elmer—Why should I? It never looks right.

Mrs. Twitchell—I resent that. I keep a house just as good as any woman could.

Elmer—I wouldn't know; I don't get around much.

Mrs. Twitchell—What's wrong with this house?

Elmer—I should start complaining right when you are talking about getting paid for it!

Mrs. Twitchell—Well, I think Mrs. Roosevelt is right and I'm with her.

Elmer—Yeah? Did she say how much salary Mr. Roosevelt pays her?

Mrs. Twitchell—He may not pay her anything; she isn't home much.

Elmer—Neither are you, from the looks of the house.

Mrs. Twitchell—We won't get nowhere arguing. I want a salary.

Elmer—How much, just for the sake of debate?

Mrs. Twitchell—What's it worth to you?

Elmer—I dunno; this is my first experience as an employer of day labor. Did Mrs. Roosevelt quote the union scale for wives?

Mrs. Twitchell—No. It all depends on how much work a wife does.

Elmer—How long have we been married?

Mrs. Twitchell—Eight years.

Elmer—You're still an apprentice. How about $2 a week, a new broom and two hours a day off for radio music?

Mrs. Twitchell—Two dollars a week! It's a good thing John Lewis can't hear you. I've been a good wife to you and cook to make you comfortable. I get up at sunrise and . . .

Elmer—All right; make it $3.

Mrs. Twitchell (squatting in a chair)—Nothing doing. I sit here until I get decent wages.

Elmer—Ah, the sit-down strike invades the American home! I surrender. I'll make it five. The pay ain't much but think of the future.

Mrs. Twitchell—I'll phone Senator Wagner, that's what!

Elmer—I'll make it $7 a week and chances.

Mrs. Twitchell—Chances of what?

Elmer—Chances you won't hear any more of Mrs. Roosevelt's speeches.

New Harvard School

Training For Government Service To Be Offered As Result Of Littauer Bequest; First Year Open To Employes Only.

By Joel Underwood.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Boston.

HARVARD'S new Graduate School of Public Administration next year will undertake a program of investigation into problems of public policy as a starting point for the establishment of the curriculum which the school will eventually offer. Made possible by the gift of Lucius N. Littauer, of New York, the school started its official activities last March, when a series of conferences with public officials was begun. The program for next year is one of the results of these conferences.

The school has come into being in response to the need, which has been widely recognized, of a closer correlation between the Government services and the universities. The development of a professionalized civil service, sufficiently attractive to capable young men, has always presupposed the existence of sources where that kind of talent could be trained and recruited. Something more than tutoring agencies for the cramming of those who are going to take civil service examinations must be provided, it was felt, if competent administrators are to result. The ordinary college program for undergraduates, however, is too diffuse and general for most of the categories in the civil service.

Suitable Backgrounds To Be Stressed In School.

THE HARVARD SCHOOL will attempt to create the opportunities for the development of that generalized kind of background which will best suit the requirements of the Government service. A mere vocational training will be warily avoided, for undue specialization means the impairment of the service. This policy is in line with that of other graduate departments of the university. The law school program does not prepare a man for the bar examinations of any particular jurisdiction, nor does the business school fit a student for a career in any particular industry, such as steel or automobiles.

One remarkable aspect of the school's program will be the character of the student body at the outset. As a result of the spring conferences with public officials, it was determined to focus attention primarily upon those in the Government employ. Indeed, it is not the intention of the school to open its doors to a general enrollment until the fall of 1938, at the earliest. Thus the work of the school next year will be on a post-professional basis. The students will be persons of some experience in the governmental service and already possessed of a civilian competence.

These men wil be consultants, rather than students, for their contributions as workers in the field will doubtless influence to some extent the scope and character of the teaching program upon which the school finally embarks. In a way, then, next year's program will be a journey of exploration for the faculty as to the course of instruction to be followed subsequently.

The course work of the year will be done in seminars organized on a research basis, and will be concerned with major current problems of governmental policy and administration. It is hoped that both the academicians and the public officials will benefit from such investigations. Administrators will get an opportunity to synthesize their special problems with those of other officials and thus perhaps acquire that objective view of themselves which it is difficult to obtain in the day-to-day routine of administration. In turn, the faculty will get contact with some of the practical aspects of governmental problems and policies.

Two Of Five Seminars To Treat Administration.

THERE WILL BE five of these group seminars in next year's program. Two of these will involve problems common to all administrative services while the other three will deal with more specialized problems of public policy. In the first group will be seminars on the administrative process and on the public relations of governmental agencies. In the second group will be seminars on public fiscal policies, price policies and on the planning and control of land use.

The seminar on public fiscal policies will have as its chairman Prof. John H. Williams, of the department of economics, who has recently been appointed dean of the Graduate School of Public Administration. This group will study public finance in its political and social as well as its economic implications. This will involve the study of public spending as a stabilizing force in business cycles and the monetary aspects of public expenditures and revenues. Deficit financing in its Federal and local aspects and the relations between public and private credit will also engage the attention of this group.

In the work which has been set out for this seminar, there will be an attempt to integrate the various departments in the university which adumbrate on the subject of public finance. This will involve the cooperation of economists, political scientists and various members of the business school and law school faculties. All the consultants who make up the student body will work directly with the faculty in this research.

Student-Consultants To Come On Furloughs.

SUCH A PROGRAM obviously requires the participation of student-consultants who can both contribute and profit by the instruction. To insure that these people will be obtained, it has been decided to accept as "junior" consultants young Government officials who have been detailed by their superiors for a period of study at Harvard. The will receive stipends while on leave of absence from the Government service.

Invitations will also be extended to officials in responsible positions in the Federal, State and local civil services for periods of residence at Harvard of varying length. Some may take part in weekly meetings of the various seminars while others may participate in only a few of the sessions in which they happen to be particularly interested.

These first steps in the establishment of a graduate school of public administration are frankly experimental. The end result is clearly perceived, for the success of the school will depend upon its ability to be of service to the Government. Great care, therefore, will be used in the development of methods to achieve this goal.

The administration of governmental services in a highly industrialized society raises problems of policy quite different from those which face a society emerging from the frontier stage. In order to handle such new problems, administrators have to be selected for different abilities, the chief one of which is the capacity to see the long-range implications of governmental policy. Mere technicians are usually not equipped with this general kind of viewpoint.

It will be the task of the new graduate school of public administration to develop persons with broad backgrounds in economics and politics. Whether it succeeds will depend in part upon the curriculum it offers, but in greater part upon the attractiveness which the civil service comes to have for competent young men who are now drawn to other professions or to business.

U. S. Perfects Gun With Deadly Aim To Locate Planes

The War Department has perfected an anti-aircraft gun that locates planes and shoots them out of the air with deadly accuracy, the United Press said last night in a copyright story.

Department officials would not discuss the gun but said it operates on a sound wave-electrical principle and aims automatically.

A weapon of this type, experts pointed out, would be of inestimable value as a defensive weapon in time of war, especially in protecting densely populated areas and the National Capital from air invasion.

Existence of the gun was disclosed after publication of reports that Germany had developed a similar weapon.

The radio mechanism was developed by the late Navy Commander William F. Gresham and a Mrs. Agnes M. Driscoll.

Bill Passed to Aid Workers Past 45

Boston, May 17 (AP).—Under the leadership of spokesmen from two industrial cities, the Massachusetts Senate passed today a bill that would penalize discrimination against employing persons over 45 years of age.

The measure, previously approved in the House, will come up again tomorrow when foes seek a reconsideration of today's vote of 15 to 8 in favor of the bill.

The measure would allow the State to advertise the names of employers found to dismiss or to refuse to hire persons because they are over 45. It would also authorize the State Department of Labor and Industries to investigate reports of discrimination.

Olive Branches

By Barnet Nover

Bull Market In Friendships.

EUROPE'S cannon are beginning to sprout olive branches.

In more than one corner of the distraught Old World enmities of long standing, as well as some of recent vintage, are being put on the shelf. Nations, no more than individuals, cannot live indefinitely in a state of unbroken tension. Sooner or later the strain becomes too great to bear. Then either tensions are radically eased or there is an explosion.

For a time, not long ago, it looked as if Europe was on the verge of an explosion of far-reaching dimensions. There is still some danger of such a development. Yet, by and large, the trend in recent days has been in the direction of more normal and happier relations.

The latest news from Italy bears this out, to some extent. Only last week the Fascist government's irritation with Great Britain reached such a point that Rome found it necessary to vent its displeasure in a spectacular, if ludicrous, form. All Italian correspondents in London were withdrawn, all but three British newspapers were barred from entry into Italy and in the regimented Italian press there followed an embargo on all coronation news.

• • • •

COUPLED with what were, ostensibly, renewed efforts on Italy's part to strengthen the Berlin-Rome axis, this suspension of journalistic relations with Great Britain was interpreted in some quarters as a sign that Italy and Great Britain were approaching the point of an open break. Yet it is now reported that Italy's journalistic war on England has ended as suddenly and as dramatically as it began.

The order has been given the Italian press to stop attacking Great Britain. At the same time the embargo on British journals has been lifted and, before long, Italian correspondents are to be permitted to return to London.

Perhaps too much should not be made of this sudden change of front by the Rome government. Yet it does to some extent, certainly, bear out the contention made in this column on several occasions: that Mussolini has no stomach for a prolonged quarrel with Great Britain. On the contrary, nothing would probably please him more than a restoration of Anglo-Italian amity, since only in that way can Italy's dangerous dependence on the Third Reich be reduced.

It is interesting to note, in this connection, that Count Ciano, Italy's foreign minister, in a recent survey of the kingdom's foreign relations, made very friendly overtures to France. It is recognized in Rome that Paris, diplomatically speaking, is on the direct route to London.

• • • •

SIGNS OF ACTUAL or potential appeasement are also to be noted in other parts of Europe. The recent Italo-Yugoslav pact, whatever the motives behind it, and they were undoubtedly mixed, does tend to relieve tensions in the Adriatic, long regarded as one of Europe's major trouble spots. Previously Bulgaria and Yugoslavia, bitter enemies since the end of the first Balkan war, buried the hatchet. It remains buried.

Now Hungary, which lost the bulk of its prewar territory to Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Rumania, has begun to show signs of a willingness to shelve its chronic hostility to the Little Entente states in order to make possible a greater measure of economic improvement in the Danube Basin.

In a recent statement, Premier Koloman Daranyi of Hungary declared that his nation, while adhering to the Rome protocols, co-operation with Austria and friendship with Germany, will not reject out of hand any proposals for co-operation with the Little Entente states. The sine qua non of such co-operation, he said, must be full recognition of Hungary's equality and a guarantee of Magyar minority rights.

• • • •

THESE ARE CERTAINLY not onerous demands. They differ considerably from the conditions previously made by the Budapest government as the price of its collaboration with its Little Entente neighbors.

In the past, Hungary has taken the position that before any projects of Danubian economic collaboration can be considered there must first be a revision of the peace treaties. But this is precisely what the Little Entente states were not prepared to sanction. Revision, as they saw it, meant territorial revision; and they were determined to keep every inch of territory they won from Hungary.

It is not unlikely, however, that they may now show a readiness to see at least the disarmament clauses of the Trianon Treaty revised so as to permit Hungary a larger armed force. It is probably realized in Prague, Bucharest and Belgrade that if this permission is not granted Hungary may do what Germany has done and re-arm despite peace treaty prohibitions.

So far as Hungary is concerned, the more conciliatory attitude it is now displaying toward its erstwhile foes is, in part at least, a manifestation of the same fear of a too rigid alignment with the Fascist powers as characterizes Austria's present policy. It is also fed by the belief that Germany and Italy, nations wedded to autarchy, are not in a position to permit any expansion of Hungarian trade with them. If Magyar trade is to be increased it will have to be with nations other than those on the Berlin-Rome axis. And, as a final consideration, the Budapest government is no doubt taking into account the circumstance that, with the subsidence of the threat of an imminent European war, wholesale treaty revision has also retreated into the distance.

• • • •

THESE VARIOUS olive branches are certainly frail in comparison with the cannon which all nations are feverishly accumulating. Yet it is a not unhopeful sign that the spirit of peace is beginning to permeate areas of Europe once centers of chronic dissension.

If the various peace gestures that are being made by this nation or that do not, necessarily, advance the cause of general European appeasement they do certainly not retard it.

The more solidly peace is established in the various corners of Europe—such as the Baltic, the Balkans and the Danube Basin—the less likelihood of any far-flung combination of discontended powers prepared to advance their national interests by force of arms. And if, as is now rumored, Great Britain and France together are prepared to take a strong line on the Austrian and Czechoslovakian problems, the hope of general appeasement would enormously be strengthened. In the Europe of today there appears to be a bull market in friendships.

Best Motion Picture

By William Lyon Phelps.

"Lost Horizon."

"Lost Horizon" is one of the best motion pictures I ever saw.

I do not believe the author of the novel, Mr. James Hilton, had any thought of its adaptation for the screen when he wrote it, and anyhow, it was not until the year after its appearance, and then, owing to the immense success of "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," that the book attracted attention in America. "Lost Horizon" was published in 1933, "Mr. Chips" in 1934.

Everyone who read "Mr Chips" looked around to see if there were not some other book by the same author. There was; and "Lost Horizon," which had not been selling at all in America, immediately went into new editions, and by the end of 1934 these two books were among the first five best-sellers in the United States.

• • • •

I regard "Lost Horizon" as the finest novel of the author's 14. It would be difficult to name two novels so unlike as "Lost Horizon" and "Mr. Chips," which resemble each other only in literary excellence.

The former, however, in the sweep of its imagination and in the spiritual qualities of its philosophical implications, is magnificent; and if it had been directly written for the screen, it could not have made a better picture. The vast mountain scenery, the flight of the airplane, call out the resources of modern photography; the only thing that cannot be adequately reproduced is the conversations, which can be prolonged in the book but not in the picture. Yet I must express my admiration for the dignity and beauty and grandeur and excitement of the screen-play. It is unforgettable.

PWA Fund Bloc Claims Vote to Get 300 Million

Ickes' Annual Drive for Part of WPA Relief Money Opens in House.

By Robert C. Albright.

Public Works Administrator Ickes' annual drive for a slice of Works Progress Administrator Hopkins' relief fund led off at the Capitol yesterday with PWA bloc claims of enough votes to earmark $300,000,000.

Representative Alfred F. Beiter, New York Democrat, and leader of the Ickes faction in the House, advanced the informal claim as he summoned a meeting of the House PWA organization for Thursday morning.

Hopkins meantime was faced with three separate movements in the House to cut the $1,500,000,000 he has placed as a WPA minimum for 1938 when the Administration's relief bill comes up in the chamber on Thursday.

Woodrum Seeks Slash.

A strong movement to hold the WPA fund to $1,000,000,000 is headed by Representative Clifton A. Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia, chairman of the sub-committee in charge of the bill.

A compromise element is led by Representative William B. Umstead (Democrat), North Carolina, who will offer an amendment for $1,250,000,000 to carry all Federal relief activities through the next fiscal year.

The third threat to a full $1,500,000,000 for Hopkins is Beiter's PWA bloc. Beiter seeks to earmark $500,000,000 for Ickes if the full relief appropriation is voted. He will ask only $150,000,000 if the bill is cut to $1,000,000,000.

Representative Woodrum, whose sub-committee attempt to cut relief funds to two-thirds of the Hopkins figure was overridden by the House Appropriations Committee, yesterday challenged reports that the President insists upon $1,500,000,000.

Stanch Roosevelt Man.

Woodrum is one of the President's stanchest supporters in the House. None in the House can remember when he ever opposed Mr. Roosevelt's wishes. And the Virginian insisted yesterday he is not moving counter to the White House this time.

"If the President is insisting upon $1,500,000,000, I think I would know about it," Woodrum told The Post. "It is my information that he has left this matter for Congress to work out. Taking both budget and relief needs into consideration, I believe $1,000,000,000 is the proper figure."

Woodrum, with bipartisan backing, will attempt to hold the appropriation to the lesser figure. If that fails, he will support a $1,250,000,000 compromise, which is believed to have the better House chance.

Pro-Hopkins members of the House expressed fears that if a House slash is made in the fund the Senate would cut it still further.

As against organized efforts to cut the fund, two independent so-called liberal blocs in the House are preparing a drive to increase it to $2,500,000,000 or even $3,000,000,000, but their position has been weakened by apparent willingness of the United States Conference of Mayors to accept $1,500,000,000.

First test of House sentiment on the issue will come early in the process of voting, as the aggregate amount for relief is provided in the eleventh line of the bill.

Then Beiter will offer a series of at least five amendments in his attempt to earmark a share for Ickes.

Beiter Will Ask Cuts.

If $1,500,000,000 is voted, the first Beiter amendment would be aimed at the $415,000,000 item for highways, roads and streets. He will attempt to trim $50,000,000 from this. He will next try to cut $200,000,000 from the $630,000,000 for public buildings, parks and recreational facilities. Then he will seek to reduce the $380,000,000 for "white collar" and women's projects by $50,000,000.

Beiter would pool the $300,000,000 thus curtailed into a special earmarking for permanent PWA projects. He would offer still another amendment, to draw labor for the project from persons "eligible" for relief, in addition to those actually on relief rolls.

Beiter yesterday called a meeting of his PWA steering committee for Thursday morning, to devise last minute strategy. He addressed a letter to every member of the House appealing for support.

"Hundreds of letters and telegrams requesting the continuance of PWA, and the appropriation of funds to carry on this program have been received by the committee," said the New Yorker. "This proposal seems to have almost universal approval."

Election Official Admits Kansas City Vote Fraud

Kansas City, May 17 (AP).—George Arnold, a Democratic election judge here, pleaded guilty to a vote theft conspiracy indictment today at the outset of the seventh trial growing out of the Government's drive on voting irregularities in the general election last November.

Eight of the 126 election workers thus far indicted have pleaded no defense and thrown themselves on the mercy of the court, but Arnold's was the first guilty plea. His sentencing was deferred until after the trial of four codefendants.

Massachusetts Senate Votes to Protect 'Saps'

Boston, May 17 (AP).—The "Sap" got a break today in the Massachusetts Senate. A vote of 21 to 8 advanced a bill under which a sign would have to be displayed in hotels and night clubs if hat check girls and cigarette girls are not allowed to keep the tips.

The sign, Senator Arthur F. Blanchard (Republican), Cambridge, argued, "makes a sap realize that he is entirely a sap."

Hopkins Hurts Hand In Scranton, Pa., Fall

Scranton, Pa., May 17 (AP).—Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress Administrator, fell today while inspecting an airport project and injured his right hand. He was treated by the project first aid man. Hopkins was here to address a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce.

Nye Asks Inquiry Of Spanish Spies' Activities in U. S.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, asked the Senate yesterday to investigate activities of foreign agents representing either Spanish war faction in America.

He urged that the inquiry cover munition purchases in violation of American neutrality laws, as well as all activities which might affect United States commerce with Spanish ports.

Nye recently told the Senate he had evidence that the Spanish Fascists were maintaining an extensive spy ring to report on the movements of American and Mexican ships.

His resolution was referred to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Gas Cell Fire Destroyed Zep, Says Survivor

Cause of Flames Still Undetermined by Investigators.

By the Associated Press.

Lakehurst, N. J., May 17.—A Hindenburg crew survivor who suddenly found himself "standing in fire" when disaster struck the dirigible on May 6 blamed today one of her 16 hydrogen-filled gas cells for the start of the holocaust.

He had started paying out a manila landing rope from a station at the tail fins under gas cells Nos. 3 and 4 when there was a muffled explosion and without warning flames poured down on him from above like wa r.

"I had the impression it was a gas cell," the witness, Hans Freund, told a board of inquiry today.

He was the only one of the dirigible's three riggers to survive.

Maj. R. W. Schroeder, of the three-man Department of Commerce board investigating the catastrophe which took 36 lives, expressed satisfaction over Freund's evidence.

Rigger's Story.

"We are localizing the thing," he said, evincing particular interest in Freund's description of the flames coming down from above. He indicated he accepted the burning gas cell as the origin of the fire. No apparent progress was made, however, in fixing the cause of the fire.

Freund, whose clothing hid the bandages covering severe burns, told his story simply and directly. He had left a hospital to testify.

He had dropped the spider lines several yards below the ship's hull from a station about 45 feet forward of the fins, and then had come to the aft station to lower another landing line. The aft line tangled in wire fin struts momentarily, but was quickly cleared, he related, and such fouling was not unusual. Everything was serene. He felt no shock from static electricity handling either of the lines and noticed no static glow.

Standing in Fire.

Then he said:

"There was a muffled detonation and I was standing in fire. It went so quickly."

"How far were you from the source of the fire?"

"I was surrounded by fire. It came, of course, from above. I had the impression it was a gas cell.

"From that moment I don't remember anything till I got out of the fin," he said.

Freund was interrogated at length about the gas cells, which he and two other riggers were charged with inspecting.

Any hydrogen leak could be detected by the odor of the gas, he said, and none was discovered during the trip.

Ventilation Working.

The ventilation system of the ship eliminated the possibility of leaking gas forming a pocket outside the cells, he declared, where it might be easier to ignite.

He told of the failure of an overpressure gas valve to work on a South American trip last year, but added that the mechanism had been replaced and no further trouble experienced.

In his opinion the fouling of the tail line on the fins had no bearing on the disaster. He smiled as he pointed out the manila rope could not cause a fire. His evidence gave no support that a broken propeller blade might have punctured the hull and a gas cell, liberating hydrogen to be ignited. He heard nothing like the structure being ripped or the sound of any object being thrown against it, he said.

Soviet Plans Drive Against Spies in Army

Supreme Councils to Dominate Vast War Machine.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, May 17.—Russia enlisted her great red army of 1,300,000 men today in a fight against followers of Leon Trotzky and against "espionage and sabotage."

A Kremlin decree established supreme military councils to dominate the army in both its new task and its normal defense functions and to provide a check against army commanders.

The hitherto dominant army commanders will be members of the new councils, but their orders must be countersigned by at least one other member of the council who will have close contact with the Communist Party.

Thus no single officer is in supreme command of troops.

Designation of the councils was seen as a direct outgrowth of the disclosures of sabotage and espionage set forth in the series of trials of confessed Trotzkyist conspirators—who named the exiled revolutionary leader as chief conspirator despite his repeated disavowal of all charges of seeking to foster overthrow of the present Communist regime. (Trotzky now is in Mexico.)

Reorganization of the red war machine was foreshadowed last week by demotion of Marshal M. N. Tuckachevsky, first vice commissar of war, whose name was mentioned in the January conspiracy trial.

Supreme Authority.

The new councils will have supreme command in recruiting and training of all forces for national defense, and in control over civilian communications and labor which is connected with defense work—subject to the commissar of war.

They are solely responsible for political education and the morale of troops, and are ordered to direct "the merciless struggle against the enemies of the people—spies, wreckers and diversionists."

They will have command of civilian gas and air defense, will recruit and train territorial and volunteer troops, direct sanitary operations, medical training, distribution of supplies, and defense of military and private property.

Cavalry Regiment To Celebrate 91st Year by Review

The Third Cavalry, stationed at Fort Myer, tomorrow will celebrate the ninety-first anniversary of the founding of the regiment with a public review.

At 9 a. m. the regiment will assemble on the review field and will go through the ceremony, "Escort to the Standards." Later the chief of Cavalry, Maj. Gen. Leon D. Kromer will review, led by Col. J. M. Wainwright, commanding officer, and the Third Cavalry Mounted Band. Following the review, Gen. Kromer will present the regiment with the battle streamer, recently awarded by the War Department for action against the Lipan Indians in 1856. The color bearers, color guard and chief trumpeter will appear in the old blue uniform of the Mounted Rifles, the original designation of the regiment.

The Third Cavalry was organized in 1846 and has served continuously since then, participating in every major war from the Mexican to the World War.

Hepburn Assails U. S. 'Agitators'

Windsor, Ontario, May 17 (AP).—Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn, addressing a Windsor civic club today, cautioned Canadian workers against following "the false leadership of agitators from the other side" of the international boundary.

"Instead of the C. I. O.," he declared, "let's reverse it and have O. I. C.—order in Canada."

The Ontario premier asserted strikes sponsored by the Committee for Industrial Organization in the United States has caused that country's foreign trade to dwindle."

Alaska Flood Ends.

Fairbanks, Alaska, May 17 (AP).—The Chena River, free of ice cakes, was back within its banks tonight after overflowing much of this city, but forecasts of warmer weather presaged possible new overflows.

Lieut. Murphy Funeral Rites Set for Today

Western High Regiment to Act as Honor Guard at Services.

Final rites will be held today for Lieut. Joseph G. Murphy, 42, of 4422 Harrison street, military instructor at Western High School, who died Saturday at Mount Alto Hospital after fighting off a heart ailment long enough to see "his boys" compete in the recent high school company competitive drill. He will be buried in Arlington Cemetery.

At the funeral services at 9 a. m. at St. Ann's Catholic Church, the entire Western regiment will act as guard of honor. Cadet officers will be pallbearers.

Stricken with an attack two weeks before the drill, Lieut. Murphy had refused to quit until he had seen his regiment compete. He was acutely stricken May 7, two days before the drill.

Company L, of the Western regiment, was adjudged the Winner. His four companies had a higher general average than those of any other school.

Since he took command of the Western cadets in 1933, his companies have won top honors in the drill three times. A veteran of the World War who served with the Rainbow Division, Lieut. Murphy had been an instructor of commercial law at Western for 10 years.

Last year he oraginzed the cadet corps at the new Woodrow Wilson High School.

Lieut. Murphy was born in Hazelton, Pa., and attended State Normal School at Bloomsburg, Pa., and the University of Pennsylvania.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Elsie Murphy; two sons, Gerald and Lawrence; four sisters, Mrs. Arthur Weber, Mrs. Arner Prim, Mrs. Frances Ferry, all of Hazelton, and Mrs. Frank Gallagher, McAdoo, Pa., and three brothers, Stephen, Daniel and John, all of Hazelton.

Gen. Clem Rites To Be Held Today

Funeral services for Maj. Gen. John L. Clem, retired, "The Drummer Boy of Chickamauga," who died Thursday at San Antonio, Tex., will be held this morning at 10:30 o'clock at St. Matthew's Church. Following services, burial will be in the Eastern Section of Arlington Cemetery, with military honors.

R. Walton Moore, Assistant Secretary of State, will be one of the honorary pallbearers. Others include Maj. Gen. Henry G. Sharpe, retired; Maj. Gen. Merritt W. Ireland, retired; Brig Gen. Augustus B. Warfield, assistant to the quartermaster general; Brig. Gen. A. Owen Seaman, assistant to the quartermaster general, and Brig. Gen. David L. Brainard, retired. The following members of the Grand Army of the Republic also will serve as honorary pallbearers: Commanders John Line, William Dorsey, John Ryan and Charles Fox.

Mrs. Malone, 81, Dies in Capital

Mrs. Katharine Gunnell Malone, 81, widow of Lieut. Edward Eugene Malone, of the Seventeenth Virginia Engineers, died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. C. M. Ashton, of 2930 Upton street northwest.

Mrs. Malone was born at Fairfax Courthouse, the daughter of the late Joshua Coffer Gunnell and Elizabeth J. Stanhope. She had been a resident of Washington for 40 years.

Besides Mrs. Ashton, Mrs. Malone is survived by another daughter, Mrs. Thomas Capell Willis, of Washington; a son, Joshua Gunnell Malone, of New York, and two sisters, Miss Sally Gunnell and Mrs. Horace Atkisson, both of this city.

Funeral services, in charge of the Rev. J. Hatch Sterrett, pastor of All Souls Episcopal Church, will be held at 1:30 p. m. tomorrow at the home of Mrs. Ashton. Burial will be at Fairfax Courthouse.

The Brown Derby Goes Abroad

Alfred E. Smith, clad entirely in brown (including his familiar brown derby), and Mrs. Smith are shown as they boarded the Conte di Savoia for their first visit to Europe. "Just a pleasure trip," Al said, denying published reports that he carried a special message from Catholic laymen to Pope Pius XI. The Smiths will have an audience with the Pope, however.

Gilmore Will Explore Horned-Dinosaur Area

A newly discovered 100,000,000-year-old horned-dinosaur pasture in the Rocky Mountains will be explored by Charles W. Gilmore, Smithsonian Institution palentologist, this summer.

Scattered remains of these strange monsters were found last year by Government geologists in beds of rocks 4,000 to 5,000 feet thick in central Utah. These rock strata were laid down in the Upper Cretaceous period, approximately 100,000,000 years ago.

Rev. Brockbank Funeral to Be Held Tomorrow

Rites at St. Dominic's, With Burial in Mt. Olivet.

Funeral services for the Rev. Sylvester R. Brockbank, 69, assistant pastor of St. Dominic's Catholic Church, who died Sunday in Providence Hospital, will be held at St. Dominic's tomorrow. Solemn requiem mass will be sung at 10:30 a. m. and burial will follow in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Father Brockbank, who had been the assistant since 1934, was stricken Holy Thursday while preaching in St. Dominic's and had been in the hospital since. He was a member of the Order of Preachers, and had been a preacher general of the Dominican Order since 1914 and church associates rated him "an outstanding preacher."

He had been engaged in missionary work for many years as well as a preacher and lecturer on religious subjects and had lectured in every State in the Union.

Born in Clearfield, Pa., Father Brockbank taught school there and later was in the wholesale grocery business in his home State. He entered the Dominican Order 48 years ago, completing his theological studies at St. Joseph's Priory, Somerset, Ohio, where we was ordained March 7, 1895.

He had been at St. Dominic's for one year in 1896 before he started 36 years of missionary work. During that time he also served as pastor of a number of churches.

Body in State.

Members of the Holy Name Society are keeping watch in the Holy Name chapel of St. Dominic's, where the body is lying in state. Tonight at 8 o'clock the office of the dead will be recited by priests of the parish.

The only known near relative who survives Father Brockbank is a brother, Dr. John I. Brockbank, of Dubois, Pa.

Mrs. Emma Leech Burial to Be Today

Funeral services were held yesterday afternoon for Mrs. Emma L. Leech, 78, who died Sunday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. C. W. Wood, of 3121 Warder street. Burial will be in Stonewall Jackson Cemetery at Lexington, Va., today.

Mrs. Leech, a native of Virginia, had been a resident of the District for 26 years. She was a graduate of the Ann Smith Academy at Lexington and taught there before coming to Washington. She was the widow of Isaac S. Leech, farmer of near Lexington and Confederate veteran.

Besides her daughter, she is survived by four sons, Thomas L. Leech, Buena Vista, Va.; Gordon, James D. and S. W. Leech, all of this city; ten grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Pension for Mrs. Taft.

Bob Burns Says

I believe opportunity knocks once on everybody's door, but the younger you are, the more apt you are to get excited and scare him away.

I had one uncle who had been workin' for years as watchman down in the railroad yards and had given up all hopes of ever betterin' himself. One day a lawyer called on him and said, "I just received word that one of your relatives died and left you $10." My uncle says "Are ya sure?" and the lawyer says "Yes, and you'll get $10 just as soon as the estate is settled." My uncle says, "Well, that's fine, but I ain't gonna take no chances—I'm gonna hold on to my job until I get the money."

Agents' Meeting

The Department of Agriculture will do most of the honors of entertaining a large group of county agricultural extension agents who will come here from 15 States on June 8, 9 and 10 to attend the professional improvement meetings sponsored by their national association. F. C. Meier, of Agriculture, is co-operating with J. E. Whonsetler, of Columbus, Ohio, in arranging the program.

States which so far have indicated representation are Alabama, Indiana, Iowa, Minnesota, Missouri, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Virginia and West Virginia.

With the developments being made in agricultural research, Meier says the association members have felt "the opportunity afforded for concentrated study in the Department of Agriculture would repay them for time and money required for the trip to Washington." For several years the association has been meeting at central points convenient to its membership.

Besides meeting with leaders of the department and its co-operating agencies here who will discuss recent developments and progress in their work, the extension agents will spend at least one entire day at the National Research Center at Beltsville, Md.

Popular Lectures

The series of lectures offered by the National Park Service have proven popular, it was announced. More than 10,000 persons attended the series during the season, November to May, 1936-37. The series consisted of lectures on various aspects of the national parks and were illustrated by colored slides and motion pictures.

In all, 18 lectures were offered. These ranged from descriptive and illustrative features of the parks, talks on wildlife, wild flowers, the archeological aspects of the prehistoric ruins in the Southwest, to the geological features of the mountains of the Northwest, the story of colonial parks and the proposed parkways. Throughout, the emphasis was laid on the opportunities afforded for recreation, scientific study and appreciation of scenic wonders in the national parks and monuments.

Applications will be accepted at the office of the Fourth Civil Service District—not later than May 27—for the position of assistant gardener in the National Capital Park Service, at $4.24 a day, and also at the Arlington National Cemetery, War Department, Fort Myer, Va., at $1,200 a year. The applicants must have reached their twentieth but not their fiftieth birthday on the closing date for the receipt of the applications. The age limits do not apply to persons granted preference because of military or naval service, except that such applicants must not have reached the retirement age. Certain experience in gardening activities is required.

Notes

The American Federation of Government Employes is planning a three-city excursion for its members and friends on Decoration Day. The cities to be visited are Chicago, New York and Philadelphia . . . Agriculture Lodge 31, A. F. G. E., will hold its spring dance and card party Thursday evening in the Broadmoor . . . Entertainment features have been arranged . . . John Schricker, Room 3630, South Building, is in charge of the advance ticket sales . . . Members of the field personnel of F. C. A. have been invited to use the inquiry desk on the first floor of the F. C. A. Building as a place of registration when visiting the Washington office . . . Card forms have been provided, designed to show the name and field location of the visitor and also to indicate where he may be reached in the F. C. A. Building during his stay in Washington . . . It is believed by the originators of the plan that the procedure will prove "of definite advantage both to official visitors and to various members of the Washington organization who may wish to get in touch with such visitors . . . Also from the F. C. A., it is announced that a four-week instruction course on the Marchant Calculating Machine has been inaugurated . . . Scenes as Co-eds Celebrated May Day at the University of Maryland

Lincoln Park Citizens Assail Daylight Time

A unanimous vote against daylight saving time for the District was recorded last night by the Lincoln Park Citizens Association.

The group elected Alfred D. Calvert president. Other officers chosen included G. Leslie Schafer, first vice president; L. R. Tindal, second vice president; James H. Allen, secretary, and B. Campbell, treasurer.

The association went on record as opposing the granting of liquor licenses to any dealer within 400 feet of a school or a church.

Lincoln Citizens

A resolution condemning methods used by sit-down strikers at the Pennsylvania Avenue Relief Station was adopted last night by the Lincoln Citizens Association, which met at Liberty Baptist Church, Twenty-third street northwest between H and I streets. The group authorized its president, E. F. Harris, to act as mediary between complainants and the public assistance division.

The Alley Dwelling Authority was criticized by the association for its alleged failure to provide any low-rental dwellings in the West End. It was pointed out that old structures in St. Mary's Court had been torn down and a 30-unit apartmentment promised to replace them, but the apartment has not been built.

Death Rate in D.C. Leads 25 States; S. Dakota Lowest

By the United Press.

The great open spaces of South Dakota had the lowest 1936 death rate listed in a preliminary survey of 25 States released last night by the United States Public Health Service. On the other hand, the residents of the District of Columbia had the highest rate.

South Dakota's death rate was 8.9 per 1,000 population while Washington's was 14.7. The average for the 25 States was 11.3 per 1,000 population and the highest since 1930.

Maryland was next to Washington in having the second highest rate. It was 13.1 per 1,000 persons.

A breakdown of the death rate by causes from 26 States having an estimated population of 80,745,000 on July 1 last year showed that cancer continued the recent trend of taking more and more lives each year. During 1936, cancer killed 112.4 persons per 100,000 population while during the previous year, it claimed 110.0 persons.

Pair Swims to Safety After Sailboat Swamps

Spanish-American Veterans Guests at Stirring Reunion

The blare of the band as it played "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight" and "Dixie" 39 years ago re-echoed in the ears of six members of old Company C, of the First District of Columbia Volunteers, of the Spanish-American War last night.

With their mellowing memories they rose to a man and drank a toast to their comrades, living and dead, who marched past President McKinley on their way to the war with Spain.

The veterans, graying, but vigorous, met at a banquet in the Harrington Hotel, and recalled how they were the support troops of Teddy Roosevelt's Rough Riders so long ago. Of the original company of 77, but 32 are still alive. Many of these are scattered throughout the States. Only six came to the Harrington Hotel to recall the days of their youth beneath a hot Cuban sun.

Present were Capt. Charles S. D. Domer, original commander of the company; Sergt. Arthur B. Claxton, only surviving sergeant of the regiment; Maj. Thacker B. Walker, Lieut. Kenneth Hale O'Connor and Privates Jerry Costello and William A. Hickey.

When the veterans and their comrades of the regiment meet here in the autumn, they will call upon President Roosevelt, they said last night.

Linking the past with present, the half-dozen veterans, all over 60, vowed they were fit and ready to defend the flag again, no matter what the emergency or where.

"And say," Hickey asked O'Connor, "do you remember the time you carried two whole sides of beef on your shoulders for the troops back in the hot tropical sun? Do you think you could do it today, sir?"

"If the men were hungry," responded O'Connor, "I could carry those sides of beef twice as far."

Bank Replacing Fidelity Gets FHLB Permit

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board yesterday authorized the issuance of certificates of membership into its banking system to the First Federal Savings & Loan Association of Washington, formerly the Fidelity Savings & Loan.

When Fidelity depositors will be able to get their money out of the closed institution was still undetermined yesterday. A Treasury official said that preparation of a schedule of assets was being compiled, but that it is "a slow and tedious job."

James Nolan, receiver for the defunct bank, said:

"We have done everything we can to hasten the clearing of the bank's books, but fully 3,000 depositors so far have failed to file a claim for their deposits. Of these about 2,000 are for deposits of less than $2.50."

The new bank is now a full-fledged member of the FHLB system, with its headquarters at Winston-Salem, N. C., regional center for this district. The FHLB yesterday, also authorized issuance of insurance for accounts. The Federal insurance will cover all accounts up to $5,000.

As soon as the schedule of assets is compiled the Treasury will petition District Court for permission to sell the assets of the defunct Fidelity to the new Federal Savings & Loan Association. Immediate court approval is expected.

Comdr. Vickery Named Maritime Board Aide

Appointment of Commander H. L. Vicery, Construction Corps, U. S. N., as assistant to Admiral Emory S. Land, commissioner in charge of the construction and technical activities of the United States Maritime Commission, was announced yesterday by the commission.

Commander Vickery was loaned indefinitely by the Navy to the Maritime Commission for this position at the instance of Admiral Land, under whom he served when Admiral Land was chief constructor and chief of the Bureau of Construction and Repair of the Navy Department.

D. C. Advocates Of Birth Control Plan New Clinic

Heartened by recent rulings of Federal courts supporting transmission of contraceptive devices, Washington's birth control advocates yesterday discussed plans for a second clinic here.

Meeting at the Textile Museum, with Mrs. George Hewitt Myers as hostess, the Family Betterment Committee outlined arrangements to open a birth control clinic in the Southwest section and heard addresses by Dr. Prentiss Willson and Dr. Bessie L. Moses.

The committee sponsors the clinic at George Washington University Hospital, the only one established in the Capital, which is under supervision of Dr. Herbert Ramsey.

Dr. Willson, Washington obstetrician, said the four groups which oppose the birth control movement are the "lunatic fringe," the sincere moralists, a small minority in the medical profession and the Catholic Church.

According to the speaker, morality would be promoted rather than damaged by freer dissemination of information and availability of materials to married couples genuinely in need of instruction and advice.

Except for the few who are opposed to the movement due to religious scruples, American physicians are practically united in favor, Dr. Willson said. Speaking on the legal aspects, he presented an opinion by a prominent Washington law firm that instructions and devices may be sent through the mails and given to clinic and office patients in full compliance with District statutes.

Dr. Moses spoke on the operations of the two birth control clinics which she administers in Baltimore, one of them in Johns Hopkins University Hospital. Other speakers were Dr. Ramsey and Mrs. John Martin, the latter representing the Family Betterment Committee.

Labor Defeats Move Attacking Executive Body

By the Associated Press.

Hagerstown, Md., May 17.—Delegations to the State labor federation convention defeated today a resolution which criticized the executive board as "unfit for re-election." The vote of 227 against the resolution and 39 for it.

The Cumberland delegation offered the resolution, charging that despite the selection of last year's meeting in favor of Cumberland as the 1937 convention city, the executive board sent out a referendum ballot as to holding the convention in Hagerstown or Cumberland.

During the debate of several hours, Charles McCloskey, Washington baker, charged the Cumberland group was dominated by the Committee for Industrial Organization. S. A. Gram, Cumberland printer, denied the allegation, and asked: "Are we to be discriminated against because we always support solidarity in the labor movement?"

Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor asserted today Maryland's unemployment compensation law and old-age pension lay "are with us to stay" as they "are not temporary makeshift plans."

The Attorney General and Lansdale G. Sasscer, president of the State Senate, were the principal speakers on the afternoon program of the thirty-second convention of the Maryland and District of Columbia Federation of Labor.

The convention opened this morning with approximately 200 delegates representing 140 labor organizations. Representatives of unions connected with the Committee for Industrial Organization had been warned they would not be seated.

Joseph P. McCurdy, president of the District Federation, reported that there were more local unions and a larger group of workers represented than in the past five years. He said greater progress had been made during the past year than in any previous year.

McCurdy announced that unions which were members of the Federation and now were affiliated with the C. I. O. would be denied seating. He said he did not anticipate any attempt to be made to bring the controversy between the C. I. O. and the American Federation of Labor into the convention.

Increased penalties for violations of the District of Columbia minimum wage law, soon to be put into effect, were urged in one of a number of resolutions offered today by District delegates attending the convention.

Another resolution favored increased appropriation for the La Follette civil liberties committee so that it could continue what was described as "a great service to organized labor;" indorsed the King-Norton bill providing for the establishment of small claims courts in the District; urged repeal of Section 213, economy act of 1932 because it is discriminatory and its application has affected chiefly women of low income and defeats objectives of the merit system.

Another urges Congress to double the financial provisions of the Wagner-Steagall housing bill and set a limit of $5 per room as rental.

Maryland University Co-eds Crown May Queen at Fete

Flora Waldman, senior, of 2730 Chesapeake street northwest, yesterday was crowned queen of the fourteenth May Day celebration on the campus at the University of Maryland, College Park. More than 1,000 persons witnessed the colorful pageant.

The maid of honor in Miss Waldman's court was Jean Barnsley, of Olney, Md. Other attendants were Florence Hill, of Laurel, Md., first maid; Mary Frances Garner, of 3400 McKinley street northwest, second maid; Dorothy Lindner, of 14 Channing street northwest, third maid; Isadora Resnitsky, of Jersey City, N. J., fourth maid; Rita DuBrown, of Newark, N. J., fifth maid; Geraldine Schuh, of Chevy Chase, Md., sixth maid, and Beatrice Crisp, Baltimore, Md., seventh maid.

The Grecian myth of "Paris and the Golden Apples" supplied the theme for the pageant, which included a cast of more than 150 co-eds. Paris, the Trojan hero, immortalized by Homer, was given permission by Venus, goddess of beauty, to select for his bride the greatest woman in history.

Famous Women Portrayed.

The most famous women in history then were portrayed by various coeds.

Mary H. Bohlin, of 1717 Columbia road northwest, Washington, played the role of Mme. Du Barrie; Evelyn Byrd, daughter of Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the university, was cast as Catherine, the Great; Edith Graham, of 1750 Lamont street northwest, as Pocahontas; Edith Sparling, of 636 C street northeast, as Queen Elizabeth; Virginia Amadon, of 5112 Thirteenth street northwest, as Helen of Troy, and Bernice Aring, of Baltimore, as Cleopatra. Dorothy Hobbs, of Linden, Md., played the role of Paris.

Four women prominent in the history of the university were guests of honor at the celebration. They were Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, of Baltimore, first woman to serve on the board of regents; Mrs. Elizabeth Hook Day, of Centerville, Md., first woman graduate of the university; Mrs. Sterling F. Newell, of Washington, first president of the Women's Student Government Association, and Mrs. Vita Ensor Hufford, of Sparks, Md., first May Queen.

Eight Coeds Honored.

Miss Adele Stamp, dean of women, was presented with a bouquet of flowers by members of the May Day cast.

Prior to the celebration, Mortar Board, women's senior honor society, offered membership to eight coeds in recognition of their high scholastic attainments.

They were Elanor Broughton, of College Park, Md.; Shirley Danforth, of Riverdale, Mr.; Ida Fisher, of Takoma Park, Md.; Mildred Hearn, of 1426 M street northwest, Washington; Dorothy Hobbs, of Linden, Md.; Eileen Kellerman, of College Park, Md.; Christine Kempton, of Lanham, Md., and Ruth Lowry, of Baltimore.

Of the 22 offices competed for in the annual class elections of the Student Government Association of the University of Maryland, 9 were taken by Washington students attending the university.

Robert L. Walton, 6318 Thirty-third street northwest; James E. Pitzer, Cumberland, Md., and Willis E. Jones, Baltimore, Md., were elected presidents of the incoming senior, junior and sophomore classes, it was officially announced by the executive council yesterday.

Paul Peffer, 5460 Nebraska avenue northwest; Robert Benbow, Sparrows Point, Md., and Carl Goller, Baltimore, Md., were named vice presidents of the rising senior, junior and sophomore groups.

Other incoming senior officers include Mildred Hearn, secretary, 1416 M street northwest; Charles Downey, treasurer, Williamsport, Md.; Leon Yourtee, men's representative, Brownsville, Md.; Elinor Broughton, historian, College Park, Md., and Lois Kuhn, women's representative, 2009 Old Georgetown road, Bethesda, Md.

Incoming junior elections placed in office Fredericka Waldman, 2730 Chesapeake street, as secretary; Jerry Hardy, Silver Spring, as treasurer; May Bohlin, 1717 Columbia road northwest, as women's representative; Peggy Maslin, Port Chester, N. Y., as historian; Van S. Ashman, 1524 Newton street northeast, as men's representative, and Eddie Johnson, Germantown, Md., as junior prom chairman.

In the sophomore elections, Tempe Curry, 405 Battery lane, Bethesda, Md., was named secretary; Kelso Shipe, 3801 Kanawha street northwest, treasurer; Martha Jane Legge, Cumberland, women's representative; Judy King, 1334 Monroe street northwest, historian, and James Kirby, Trappe, Md., men's representative.

Lodge to Continue War on Lay-Offs

Members of General Accounting Office Lodge, No. 8, American Federation of Government Employes, meeting last night to discuss the announced layoff of approximately 300 G. A. O. temporary workers, were told their proposal for two weeks' notice, plus accrued leave, had been rejected. The lodge voted to pass its efforts to secure the two weeks' leave.

The adjustment committee and the executive council of the lodge were instructed to carry the request again to W. W. Richardson, chief of personnel in the G. A. O., who had declined the leave proposal. If unfavorable action comes from this source, the request will be carried higher, it was said.

Officials said lack of funds is responsible for the dismissals, which are expected to occur about June 30. Only temporary workers are involved. Workers of this character number, at the present time, about 2,700 in the G. A. O.

2% Sales Tax Is Considered For District

Seal Says $5,000,000 Would Be Raised by Retail Levy.

By James D. Secrest.

A 2 per cent retail sales tax was considered yesterday by the District Commissioners' special tax committee as the latest undrafted proposal for solving the city's financial dilemma.

Elwood H. Seal, acting chairman of the committee, disclosed that the sales tax now appears the most likely recommendation as a substitute for both the business franchise tax and the income tax. He said it would raise $5,000,000 a year.

He explained, however, no definite decision has been reached and no recommendation will be made probably until another conference with the House sub-committee on District revenue.

The sub-committee, still groping for a tax program that will raise between $6,000,000 and $8,000,000, will meet in executive session today. The Commissioners have been advised they are not wanted.

Chairman Kennedy said he expected a decision will be reached as to whether an income tax or a sales tax will be recommended. He indicated the sub-committee is inclined to retain the business privilege levy.

Seal said that should a sales tax be recommended by this committee it probably would contain a provision exempting certain staple food products. Essential drugs and medical goods also would escape the tax.

The sales tax was reached by a matter of deduction, Seal explained. All members of the committee were not present, however, at yesterday's meeting.

"The question of who is to be exempt, and whether a law including the Federal employes would be constitutional, has convinced us that a local income tax should not be recommended," he said.

"As for the business franchise tax, it seemed to us that a levy on gross receipts would be passed along both by the wholesaler and the retailer to the consumer, probably with a little extra charge thrown in.

"That would mean that ultimately the purchaser would pay more for goods under a business franchise tax than he would with a straight sales tax."

The tax committee believes the licensing provisions of the suggested busines privilege tax, covering professional as well as business men, might well be retained. It would raise, however, but $200,000 a year.

So far the Kennedy sub-committee and the District Commissioners have reached an agreement on only three proposed taxes, and these would raise only about $2,500,000.

They are a motor vehicle weight levy, estimated at $1,500,000; an inheritance tax, $800,000, and an increase in the insurance tax, $200,000.

Whether or not a gasoline tax increase of 1 cent is adopted by the House sub-committee, it appears doubtful that the transfer of some $500,000 to other than highway items will be allowed. This will mean that none of the gas tax boost, even if approved, may be used to reduce the anticipated deficit, as the gas tax is not included in the general fund.

Concert Postponed.

Due to other official duties, the weekly concert by the United States Marine Band, scheduled for tomorrow, has been postponed until the following night, Thursday, at 8 o'clock.

Mae West Bets Her Dusenberg Can Win Race

Hollywood Star and Music Director to Stage Test Between Juggernauts.

Hollywood, May 17.—Lazy-eyed Mae West and Georgie Stoll, sharp-faced, bushy-haired film music director, are at odds over speed of their cars and may race it out for a side bet at Muroc Dry Lake.

It all began when Mae's chauffeur, Alex Havier, cast a sneer at Stoll's super-charged Dusenberg, which Stoll claims is the fastest stock car in the world, capable of 165 miles an hour.

Havier gibed that nobody has ever seen the Stoll pride and joy do 165, while Mae's chariot, a cream-colored roadster of the same make, has actually turned up 139 without the throttle being fully open.

La West supported Havier's argument with a white-toothed grin and an offer of cash that says her car is faster.

Stoll, who recently alibied to speed coppers that his hack doesn't drive well until it passes 45, retorted that he can do 139 in second, and the race may be arranged any day now.

If and when the race is run, Mae won't drive, and neither will Stoll, wheels to be turned over to professional racers or stunt men.

The situation recalls the speed feud of Zeppo Marx and Gary Cooper a few years ago, which ended with a Cooper victory over the same course. However, the Cooper Dusenberg had to go only a little over 100 miles an hour to beat Marx's German Mercedes-Benz.

Lupe Velez, wife of deposed Tarzan Johnny Weissmuller, is reported dickering with Sol Lesser to play opposite Glenn Morris, new apeman, in a coming Tarzan picture. However, the report is at odds with the Velez demonstration at a fight club recently, when Morris was introduced as the new "Tarzan."

"Hee ees fake," screamed Velez. "Only real Tarzan ees my Johnee."

Dr. Rufus von Kleinsmid, president of the University of Southern California, where the football teams used to come from, added to the gaiety of Metro's "General Hospital" set when he puzzled over identity of Tony Beard, former Trojan grid star who is playing a bit.

"Your face seems familiar," puzzled Von Kleinsmid.

"It ought to be," returned Beard, "I went to your school for nine years."

Tala Birell is having trouble with her literary work because the editor of a Bucharest, Rumania, newspaper, for which she writes a gossip column, apparently believes all he sees in the movies.

When the current technicians' strike broke out the editor wired her for coverage, and Birell shipped him the dope on peaceful studio picketing and such.

"This is not what we want," he cabled back. "Give us details of the bombings and shootings."

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ♣	3 ♠	Pass
5 ♣	Pass	5 ♡	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

South's bidding was flawless throughout. It was North's first response that paved the way to what should have been a bad contract. Over two clubs North had the perfectly normal response of two hearts. His double spade raise was wrong from two different points of view. First, his hand was not strong enough, and, second, the bid failed to disclose the suit that was North's mainstay, namely hearts. Had North mentioned hearts, South, instead of being encouraged, would have gone forward cautiously since duplication would be immediately apparent.

Over the three spades South had apparently only one question to resolve and that was, how many club losers were in the combined hands? His five-club bid was an asking bid to elicit this information (remember in order to ask in the opponents' suit it is necessary to jump one level). North's five-heart answer, showing second round control of clubs and the heart Ace, could not fail to impress South that a slam was an odds-on chance. As it happened, South's bidding and subsequent good play must have mollified the Fates to overlook North's first response, because the contract was fulfilled.

West opened the club King and, not knowing that declarer was void of hearts, tried to "talk him out" of a heart finesse by leading the suit himself.

Declarer, who had been thoroughly disgusted when he saw that there was grave danger of losing a diamond trick in addition to the club already lost, welcomed the chance for a free finesse, and put up dummy's Queen. This holding, a low heart was ruffed with a high trump, and a low trump led to dummy's ten. Another low heart was ruffed high, and the Ace of spades followed by a low spade to the Jack took care of the outstanding trumps. Now declarer hopefully cashed the heart Ace, discarding a second diamond thereon. If the heart suit were found to break 4-4, the fifth heart would permit the discard of the last losing diamond. When East showed out, however, marking West with a stopper, only one line of play appeared propitious.

The ten of diamonds was led, declarer intending to let it ride unless East covered. East tried to mask his holding by covering with the Queen, but declarer won, re-entered dummy by ruffing his losing club, and took a second diamond finesse for victory.

Paul Whiteman Solicits Musical Contributions As Exhibit Pieces in Endowed Musical Museum

BELL.

AN EARNEST effort is being made by Paul Whiteman, so I am reliably informed, to collect musical relics, manuscripts, instruments and other material pertaining to the growth of music in this country suitable for installation in the Whiteman Museum of American Music, which he is endowing at Williams College, Williamstown, Mass.

During his week's engagement at Loew's Capitol Theater, beginning Friday, Mr. Whiteman, dean of American "modern music," will be happy to receive any contributions or memoranda in harmony with his purpose. As a matter of fact, the Capitol management makes it known that whatever residents of Washington have, anything around the house that would be appropriate to such an enterprise—and with which they are willing to part—will be accepted at the theater immediately, against the coming of Mr. Whiteman and his orchestra at the end of the week. These contributions to a cause that ought to prove valuable to the development of American music will be put on display in a sort of local preview, beginning with the opening of Friday's engagement.

It is reported that since the first announcement of the establishment of the Whiteman Museum, contributions of varying degrees of value have come from all parts of the country. Old organs have been discovered in New England attics; from the Middle West and the Pacific Coast the collection is accumulating manuscripts of worth.

There also, of course, is the less satisfactory side of the enterprise. If all the alleged Cremona and Stradivarius violins that have been offered the Whiteman collection at fancy prices were genuine, no quality of rarity would remain.

Whiteman is the originator of the idea of an American Museum of Music and the project immediately was embraced by Williams College. A concert was given in the New York Hippodrome a few weeks ago to raise funds for the preliminary launching of the undertaking.

It is important to bear in mind that the primary purpose of the museum is not to house only musical curiosities, but everything of merit that may relate to the development of music in this country.

Already, the collection includes items that date back to colonial days and that picturesque period when slave ships were depositing their human cargoes on New England shores.

Although in yesterday's review of "Lost Horizon," current as a "road show" at the National Theater, the impression may have been conveyed that we were not completely captivated by this latest of the Frank Capra productions for Columbia Pictures, it should be emphatically stated that in this subject there is an acute exposition of a sensitive philosophy of life that may not lightly be laughed out of countenance. This idealistic contemplation of man's duty to man may be succinctly summarized in two words, just as it is in the picture: "Be kind." "Lost Horizon" in the last analysis—at least as it has been brought to the screen on such a pretentious scale—is almost pure fantasy. It develops a species of beauty that perhaps only the idealist will be able to perceive, but it is there if you look for it.

There seems to be a growing probability that this department's constant contention that color has a definite place on the screen soon will be borne out.

In a wire received at this desk yesterday, Samuel Goldwyn, one of the foremost producers in the industry, releasing through United Artists, made the flat statement that in his view the old black-and-white motion picture would disappear entirely from the Hollywood scene in a comparatively short time. It is his intention to make only films done in Technicolor in future.

"Within the past six months," Mr. Goldwyn said, "color technique has taken vast steps forward. Color no longer interferes with the telling of the story. There is no doubt that most of the present important pictures would utilize the new color processes immediately if there were sufficient equipment to care for them.

"I am announcing formally today that I shall make 'The Goldwyn Follies,' my forthcoming $2,000,000 musical, entirely in Technicolor; also 'The Real Glory,' which has as its background Manila and the Philippines during the early period of American occupation, and 'You Can Be Beautiful,' the beauty industry story, in which I have decided to co-star Gary Cooper and Merle Oberon. I would gladly include 'The Adventures of Marco Polo,' but Dr. Herbert F. Kalmus, of Technicolor, frankly advises that his company is not yet able to supply that much equipment.

"Color," Mr. Goldwyn concluded, "will not mean any change in screen technique as far as I am concerned. Instead, it merely will join with sound and music as permanent and acceptable aids to screen story telling."

The line seems to have formed and the procession started!

So now it comes out about that cryptic "blind" campaign, centering on the date of June 14. It seems that the Roadside Theater will open its season that date with another of its ancient mellerdrammers, "Wizard of the Wave." That must be an ancient one. I have been around the playhouses a long time now and I confess I never heard of it. They tell me it was a hit at "Old Vic's" in London when that latterly distinguished cradle of the drama was "the Minsky's of the British capital.

It is enlightening to note that the 1937 poll conducted by the National Institute of Social Dancing, which represents approximately 1,200 dancing academies in the United States, resulted in the following orchestra ratings. In the order named, the best bands were voted to be Hal Kemp, Guy Lombardo, Horace Heidt, Benny Goodman and Eddy Duchin.

Further significance for local theatergoers is lent these statistics by the fact that all of these organizations either have been heard recently, or will be soon, on the stage of the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater. Hal Kemp is there now. Guy Lombardo comes on May 21 and Benny Goodman on June 4. The rest have been here.

Yesterday morning it was a scraggly looking dog that was on the front porch—apparently a cross between a police dog and a collie, with the accent on a mastiff. Could it be that I am being kidded, or something?

The Swimming Season Approaches

With the Crystal Pool at Glen Echo soon to open and the open waters in and around the District beginning to invite the splashing about of bathers, it is interesting to note what the well-undressed young women of the beaches will be wearing. This is Elsie Valentine, recently signed to a contract by Twentieth Century-Fox as one of their junior actresses, clad in what is described as "an overskirt of white jersey, dotted in red, which matches the 'bra' top of the suit and is worn over red jersey shorts."

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

HOLLYWOOD, May 17.—I wonder if most people get as much fun from "grouching" as I do? On dark days my spirits drag bottom and I like to bark at people and things. I really like it. Now I think I am normal in other respects, and that is why I wonder if other people also have days when they derive a personal satisfaction out of airing their private irks. At any rate, this is one of those days and I am off on a hand-biting tour. Mad dog! Mad dog!

GRACIE ALLEN.

I wish I could make a bonfire of all scenes in which every last person in an audience applauds madly after the star sings or dances. In real life, audiences are never 10 per cent enthusiastic. There are always a few bored people who "did not like it."

I get no kick out of heavies who mouth curses so plainly that a child can lip-read them. The Will Hays office will not permit the words, therefore why the insinuations which are almost as offensive?

Also, what about letting a movie hero show fear? I am weary of super-brave screen males who run a gamut of belching guns and come out, not only alive, but nonchalant.

I could keep this up for hours, but already I feel in better mood than when I began this piece. Like the dog that cannot resist a ferocious bark before it sidles up for an ear-scratch, I have used up my energy. Now I want to be friendly.

Private aside to Bing Crosby. Not to set any thorns in your crown, but you may be intrigued to know that your personal secretary's favorite movie star is Fred MacMurray.

I ran onto Gracie Allen and George Burns at the Trocadero last night. While she waited for George to go through his pockets four times in search of his hat check (which he at last discovered in his wallet), Gracie said, "Do I look crazy?" I retorted that at the moment George looked slightly adrift, but she looked both sane and pretty.

"Read this," she instructed, extending a letter from a man in Maine, who wrote: "I think you are crazy but my girl friend says you are not. Please prove it by sending me $50 for no reason at all." Burns growled: "On the subject of sanity, that guy is a little bit on the Gracie side!"

This amusing situation happened on one of the major lots a few days ago. A convention was taking place in town and 200 members were granted the privilege of visiting the studio.

Senate, House Both Opposing New Farm Bill

Committee Hearings on Proposal Are to Be Pushed Today.

By Russell Smith

Difficulties multiplied in the path of the new-born 1937 farm legislation when it was proffered yesterday to Congress by representatives of organized farmers.

Designed to apply four years of experience with Federal control to correction of recurring agricultural ills, the bill met with objections on Capitol Hill in both House and Senate, and was under fire even by some of the organizations supposedly indorsing it.

Hearings will be continued before the House Agriculture Committee today, while an effort will be made to present it to an informal meeting of members of the corresponding Senate committee this afternoon.

Jones' Reaction.

Chairman Jones (Democrat), Texas, apparently voiced the view of a majority of his Agriculture Committee yesterday when, after a White House conference, h esaid:

"This proposal has a lot of triggerwork in it, and the committee will want to examine all angles very carefully before doing anything to upset the soil conservation program. We have a farm act which is functioning very satisfactorily, and we'll have to be shown conclusively that this plan improves it."

The chairman apparently was still in the dark as to what President Roosevelt's attitude is toward the bill, despite his session at the White House. His coolness was reflected in the statement of Representative Hope (Republican), Kansas, the ranking minority member, that he is "very reluctant to countenance any form of compulsory control, although we may have to come to it some time."

Permanency Sought.

In the Senate, Senator Guy M. Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, said efforts were being made to hold the meeting of Agriculture Committee members today. He added that he is glad such a bill has been introduced, in order that some progress may be made toward a permanent farm plan.

"We will always have the farm problem with us until we devise some long-time remedy," he said. "This will at least give us a start, so that if no bill can be drafted at this session we will be better prepared at the next session."

Gillette is chairman of a Senate sub-committee engaged in study of another general farm plan. Hence his pessimism as to possible action at this session was regarded as significant.

Dairymen Opposed.

In addition to these developments, Representative Boileau (Progressive), Wisconsin, said he is very doubtful if the organized dairymen will go along, since he fears the bill will promote diversion of acreage to pasture, with no limitation on cattle offered for sale.

Southern cotton farmers already are skeptical of the program, since they see no guarantee to bolster prices against the downward pull of the world price level. Despite earlier agreement to go along on this bill, they may become restless if it develops the dairy groups are not going to back the measure.

Tariff Criticism.

A final criticism of the bill offered yesterday was that its provision for a tariff on farm goods which would rise when United States prices were low, and decline as prices rose, would be virtually inoperative for cotton, tobacco and wheat.

On behalf of the bill, Earl C. Smith, president of the Illinois Agriculture Association, told the committee as the hearings opened yesterday that the bill is based on the "philosophy of plenty, not scarcity." He defended it vigorously.

Smith occupied much of his testimony with an explanation of the bill's details. It would employ the ever normal granary idea of Secretary Wallace through commodity loans; the AAA principle of benefit payments, but would use them only to guarantee the difference between actual and "parity" prices; the Bankhead cotton and Kerr-Smith tobacco acts' theory of penalties for noneco-operation; the AAA idea of contracts between individual farmers and the Government, and the new sliding scale tariff.

The object would be to guarantee the farming population an income equivalent in buying power to that it enjoyed in 1909-1914.

Gasoline From Coal Called a Possibility

Cincinnati, May 17 (AP).—The possibility that coal might furnish the Nation's future gasoline supply was held out today before the opening session of the American Mining Congress' fourteenth coal convention and exposition.

Estimating that America's coal reserves would last another 3,000 years, Julian D. Conover, of Washington, secretary, declared mineral economists predicted a shortage of fuel oil and and gasoline "in the not distant future."

"Since research men point out that gasoline can be made from coal and retailed at from 15 to 25 cents a gallon, there is the definite prospect that coal will furnish our future national gasoline supply," he said.

Famous Editor and Colleague Interview Clown

Espeshally Good Show Seen By Nicky on Circus Grounds

Capital's 9-Year-Old Editor Impressed by Hipopotomus; Giraffes Have Long Tungs, Why Can't Zoo Have Giraffes, Too?

(By Nicky Arundel, 9-year-old editor of Nicky's News, and Prescott Pardoe, News Editor of Nicky's News at the invitation of The Washington Post.)

The first thing we did when we got to the circus was to go see Felix Adler. He is head clown and a swell guy. We went into a speshial tent where there were about a hundred men fixing themselves. Everybody was talking and laughing and each person had a little tub of water with his name on it. There were some midgets there too, and they were having a swell time kidding everybody.

Felix took us to the grand parade with him. We were sure the elephants were going to step on us but Felix watched us.

There were all sorts of clowns at the circus. There was one big man without a body who had an enormous hat. There was a hipopotomus whose mouth kept opening and shutting and you could see a clowns head inside. There was a man on stilts with ears as big as an elephants.

Thrilling Parashute Leap.

The clowns did another funny thing. they hoisted a box up near the top of the tent just before they shot a toy cannon. Another clown had climbed into the cannon. Then the box opened and a man fell out with a parashute making it look like the man had been shot out of the cannon. The man who really got in the cannon did not get out until they took it away.

In a trapeese praformance one man turned a loopty-loop and was caught by the other man's hand. Another lady tried this and she missed. It was awful. She fell in the net. She tried it again and this time she did not fall. It sure was a good thing the net was there then.

There were 2,000 or 3,000 people at the circus. We tried to count them but we gave up. Some people would clap up at one end and everybody would look up there and before they could look back there would be a lot of clapping at the other end. Then the people would look around that way. This was espeshally true when the air was filled with girls.

Very Scary Act.

The elephants were very well trained. When the elephants didnt do things right the keeper would take a jagged stick and make them mind.

When the people were riding bikes acros the wire you would have to look the other way. It was very scary. You could put your hands over your eyes and look through your fingers at them. You were very happy when they got across the wire. It was higher than a house and sometimes a whole lot of people rode on the same bike across one wire. Those actors who rode bikes on the high wires gave people a lot of thrills.

There were some ladies dressed in green who walked on a tight wire. One lady had a parasol and carried one person on her head all the way across the wire and down. She also did a somersault backward on the wire. It was very thrilling for the crowd. If she had missed she would have fallen and probably hurt herself badly. They said she was the only lady in the whole world who could do this act.

After a while, 64 horses came into one ring. There were some little horses, too. In the middle there was a stand with a lady and a hound dog on it. The horses all galloped around the stand. It was a miracle how all the horses got into one ring.

Horses Act Beutifly.

Here is some more about there horses. Eight horses came into the middle ring. They were all numbered one, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight. The ringmaster got them all mixed up and without a word of comand they got into their place like they should be.

One of the white horses reared up on his hind legs and walked around in a circle. When it went down it didnt find its place very well. The ringmaster had a long whip, but he did not hit the horses. They kept time with the music while they were going and they did this beutifly.

Dorothy Herbert had one of the prettyest horses in the circus. They said she was a famus horseback rider. She was blind folded and rode through fire over a high fence. While she was blindfolded they made the fence hire and she didnt know it. When she came to the fence she jumped over it and did not nock it down or touch it. She did not even hold on with her hands. I think she did very well and I am glad she did not fall down and get herself burned. Lots of people covered there eyes up when this fire thing was going on. It was scary.

Here is the most terrible part of all. They are the Zacchinis. These men are two brothers. They were shot out of a cannon almost 20 feet long. They landed almost over our head. First they put on gas masks and looked like Buck Rogers and got into the cannon. We waited a couple of minutes until suddenly there was a terrible exploshun and two men shot out through space from the cannon. It was a meracle they were alive. Smoke was evrywhere. It was so awful you had to put your fingers in your ears. This was the end of the circus.

Cowboy Lasos Horses.

The wild western show came next. It was with Tim McCoy. He is the only man in the world who can laso six men and six horses all at once. He did that at the circus. Then he took a rifle and had a man throw up some little round things. They are called skeets. Each time one was thrown up Tim shot it to peases, before that he naled some things to a bored which was raised up into the air and shot them with a pistol. This was some shooting.

We saw three giraffes at the circus. We found out that giraffes have tungs as long as your arm. The keeper held us up so we could touch these tungs. They were beutiful and nice animals. One of them was in the grand parade with us. If they have giraffes at the circus why cant children have them at the zoo. That is what we want to know.

Death Penalty Demanded for HatchetMurder

Girl Defendant Cool as Photos of Mother's Body Are Shown.

By the Associated Press.

Jersey City, N. J., May 17.—A woman who saw much of what went on in the other side of her house told a jury today what she saw and heard there the night of last July 31 when the State charges 17-year-old Gladys MacKnight hacked her mother to death with a hatchet as her 18-year-old sweetheart held her.

The death penalty was demanded by the prosecutor, Daniel T. O'Regan, as Gladys and young Donald Wightman, a former choir singer, went on trial in Hudson County court.

Only a thin partition separated Mrs. Elizabeth Feury's side of the house on avenue A, Bayonne, from the kitchen in which the body of Mrs. Helen MacKnight, 47 Bayonne club woman, was found lying in a pool of blood.

Saw Hatchet Before.

A mild-mannered woman of middle-age, Mrs. Feury said she had seen Gladys use the sharp-bladed hatchet to wedge open a locked garage door and a stuck window in the brown-painted house where the MacKnight and Feury families lived.

Gladys, her boyish bob of last July gone and her long blonde hair now curled at her neck demurely, never shifted her cool blue eyes as photographs were produced showing her mother's body with deep head wounds, lying on the kitchen floor.

Only once did she flinch—when the hatchet, its blade still showing dark stains, was identified by Mrs. Feury and passed down the row of jurors.

She regained her composure quickly and was stonely calm as Mrs. Feury identified the dark blue culottes, yellow shirt and halter she had worn for her expected "twilight game of tennis" with Wightman which was never played.

Donald sat expressionless as Mrs. Feury told her story, his pale face in striking contrast to his bright blue shirt and red hair.

He and Gladys averted glances at each other. The former sweethearts are now apparently enemies, each seeking to shift the blame upon the other.

"I heard Mrs. MacKnight scream twice," Mrs. Feury related. "The first was a horrible scream, and the second as if she were choking.

Nothing the Matter.

"I heard a thud as if she fell to the floor. I ran back. I thought Mrs. MacKnight was ill. I saw Gladys with her back turned to me, standing by the icebox.

"Her face was red and here eyes were staring.

"I said, 'Glady, what's the matter with your mother?'

"She said, 'There isn't anything the matter. * * * She only cut her finger.'

"I said, 'I heard her fall. Did she faint?' and Gladys answered, 'No, that was Donald and I wrestling.'

"I went away and came back, and that time Gladys said, 'Oh, go away!'"

Later she was summoned by Mrs. MacKnight's husband, Edgar, when he came home from work and found his wife's body, Mrs. Feury testified.

She told how she found the body lying in blood, and beside it a package of ham and pork from the delicatessen—the delayed dinner which the State charges threw Gladys into a slaying mood.

15 Democrats Unite to Fight Court Change

Senators Form Bloc in Secret Caucus; 14 Will Oppose Compromise.

ents entering Wheeler's private office.

The other Senators followed quickly. The first act of the meeting was to slam the office transom shut, so that no echoes of the debate would seep out into the corridor.

Bulow refused to comment as he left, and refrained from declaring his opposition other than to say: "You know the crowd I'm training with."

McCarran definitely stated he will abandon his own compromise proposal, adding: "I am not going to withdraw it. I am not even going to offer it. Farley said there will be no compromise and so there will be no compromise."

Much of the time of the session was consumed in checking over all the major compromies offered, including the latest, those of Senator M. M. Logan (Democrat), Kentucky, originally an out-and-out supporter of the President's bill. Logan wishes to change the retirement age in the bill from 70 to 75, to fix a permanent court at nine members, but permit temporary appointments for each member serving past 75 years of age; to limit the temporary appointments to one a year, and other variations.

Two opposition leaders, Senators Edward R. Burke, of Nebraska, and Frederick Van Nuys, Indiana, both Democrats, were not present at the meeting, but one opposition member declared, "They were present in spirit. Neither will accept any compromise offered."

Burke, returning last night from a speaking tour South into Texas, issued a statement, saying:

"I have just returned from Texas, where I delivered three addresses in opposition to the proposal to enlarge the Supreme Court in order to influence its decisions. I talked with all classes of people. The sentiment is overwhelming."

"Whatever the reasons may have been for the election of a Congressman recently who pledged his support to the plan, on a straight issue the opposition would smother it.

"I am glad to learn that by edict of the President there is to be no compromise on his proposal to enlarge the Supreme Court. It is to be all or nothing, a wholly subservient court or a truly independent one. That is well. * * * If the President loses, that will end the matter with one exception. Congress should then press for adoption of a constitutional amendment fixing the membership of the court at whatever number experience and common sense show is for the highest efficiency. Otherwise we may have to fight the battle all over again every time the Attorney General loses a case in the Supreme Court."

Today the Senate Judiciary Committee will hold its long-awaited conclusive session, when balloting will begin on the bill and all amendments. Until the developments of last night it had appeared there was still a possibility a compromise proposal might be reported out of the committee. That hope of the proponents appeared to have died in the blasts emanating from the opposition meeting yesterday, some Senators held last night.

Much of the opposition of the former compromisers centered around the statement of Postmaster General Farley on Friday last, when he said: "When Senator O'Mahoney comes down here wanting help on some sugar legislation, his conscience won't be bothering him, will it? Or when Senator McCarran wants aid for his State?"

The latest addition to the mountain of literature pro and con the court proposal, meanwhile, came yesterday in the form of a memorandum on the constitutionality of the bill, prepared by Martin Taylor, of Chicago, an attorney, and distributed widely by the American Bar Association.

Taylor argued that the bill is actually unconstitutional, and not, as assumed, within the letter of the Constitution. His points were based on the arguments that the bill is unconstitutional because "its administration is designedly intended to effect a purpose different from its express purpose. It does not directly remedy a defect in the judicial system."

"It violates established constitutional principles of the separation of powers; there is precedent for examining into the statements of the proponents of a bill; inferior courts in this country can be changed by the legislature because they are not constitutional courts, and, however embarrassing it may be, the Supreme Court has in the past, and must, to protect the rights of a litigant who raises the question, pass upon questions where some of the members have an individual relation to the question."

Girls Get $100 For Vice Dates, Hoover Asserts

Beauty, Charm Essential for Baltimore's Most Swanky Houses.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Beauty, personality and charm were requisites of girls procured for swanky Baltimore houses in which they earned from $5 to $100 for "each date," J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, said yesterday.

Back in his office after directing raids in a white slave cleanup in Baltimore which ended in the arrest of 49 suspects, Hoover pledged a continuing Federal war against the traffic.

Conspiracy to violate the Mann act was charged to 13 of the 49 persons arrested.

All pleaded not guilty upon their arraignment before United States Commissioner James K. Cullen in Baltimore. Four men and nine women were charged with being engaged in the white slave traffic. Fifteen were named as witnesses and the remainder were released. Several of the defendants testified they had police protection at the establishments they operated.

The raids, Hoover said, trapped a man named James Costello who was said to have been identified as a suspect in a Philadelphia murder case.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Costume recital by Dorothy Seegar, soprano, assisted by Frederick Bristol, pianist, in Wardman Park Theater Monday night. Program: "L'Eventail" (Massenet), "Chanson de Marie Antoinette" (Jacobson), "Berceuse Amoureuse" (Stearns), "Rebel Song" (Everett Stevens), "Balinese Ritual" (Everett Stevens), "Classic Greek Processional" (Thierfelder), "L'Extase de la Vierge" (Massenet), Songs of the Elegant Eighties and Gay Nineties.

Of the possible variations which the art of singing allows, Miss Seegar chose for her recital last evening that of the chanteuse, using the accessories of costume and acting in the interpretation of an interesting program. It was almost inevitable that her reading should have reminded her older auditors of Yvette Guilbert, and the comparison was in no way to her detriment. For Miss Seegar has a keen dramatic instinct, the ability to assume characters convincingly, and the power to evoke illusion on a severely draped stage.

In her singing a natural charm of personality is adjutant to a clear and fresh voice, secure in intonation and firm in timbre. It is a flexible voice, excellently trained and enjoyable for its pure quality of tone. She uses it with artistry in inflection, in grace of phrasing, and in the shading of color for emotional expression.

Her program was arranged as a gallery of feminine portraits. Massenet's "L'Eventail" served for a court lady, Myron Jacobson's arrangement of Marie Antoinette's song for a peasant girl; Theodore Stearns' "Berceuse Amoureuse" for the woman of allure, and Everett Stevens' "Rebel Song" for the radical in Union Square.

Particularly effective was Miss Seegar's presentation of a balinese ritual to music arranged by Everett Stevens from Hindu melodies. In this ceremonial chant the movements of the hands in symbolical gestures were admirably contrived. The religious emotion was continued in the Grecian mode with Thierfelder's setting of a poem by Pindar, and in the Christian tradition with Massenet's "L'Extasce de la Vierge."

In her final group Miss Seegar revived the sentimentality of the late nineteenth century with ballads of the eighties and nineties. With just the right touch of burlesque she brought from the not distant past such once-popular dities as "White Wings That Never Grow Weary" and "Say Au Revoir But Not Good-by."

State Levy on Chain Stores Is Upheld by Supreme Court

Tribunal Validates Louisiana Law; Rush of Similar Measures Foreseen; Return of AAA Processing Taxes Is Denied.

Court upheld the authority of the Interstate Commerce Commission to forbid railroads to make allowances or grant refunds to industries for the spotting or moving about by them of freight cars on their properties.

The Louisiana tax law which the court upheld was enacted in 1934, when the late Huey P. Long dominated the politics of that State. It levied a graduated tax on enterprises operating two or more stores or mercantile establishments. On stores operated in Louisiana belonging to a chain or group of not more than 10 stores, irrespective of where they are located, the tax is $10 for each store. This tax is graduated upward to $550 per store belonging to a chain of more than 500 stores.

The Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., operating 15,082 stores throughout the United States and Canada, had 106 stores in Louisiana which were subject to the highest bracket of the State tax—$550 for each store. The A. & P. undertook to challenge the validity of the law and was joined in the action by F. W. Woolworth Co., J. C. Penney Co., Montgomery, Ward & Co., Sears Roebuck & Co. and Liggett Drug Co.

3 Objections Discounted.

They contended the act was unconstitutional because it arbitrarily discriminated in favor of local as against national chains, was an attempt to tax property and activities beyond the State's jurisdiction and burdened interstate commerce.

Taking up these objections one by one, Justice Roberts contended there was no substance to any of them. He pointed out that the levy under fire was an occupational or license tax. He pointed out that the court had upheld several State laws imposing a graduated tax on chain stores based on the number within the State. The question was whether stores in a chain outside of the State properly could be counted.

"If the competitive advantage of a chain increase with the number of its component links," Justice Roberts asserted, "it is hard to see how these advantages cease at the State boundary. Under the findings a store belonging to a chain of 100, all located in Louisiana, has not the same competitive advantages as one of 100 Louisiana stores belonging to a Nation chain of 1,000."

Lower Court's Findings.

"The appellants lean heavily on the findings of the (lower) court respecting the relative business in New Orleans of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Co. and the H. G. Hill Stores, Inc., a Louisiana corporation. The court found that the operations of the two are generally of the same character; the former conducts 106 stores in the State, 62 of which are in the City of New Orleans; the latter 92 in the State, of which 87 are in the city.

"Each concern conducts grocery and meat stores with substantially the same line of merchandise, and sales methods are practically the same. The gross volume of sales of Hil in New Orleans is much greater —it has more stores and does more business per store in that city than the Atlantic & Pacific. The court further found, however, that the total purchasing power of the Atlantic & Pacific is much greater than that of Hill; that Atlantic & Pacific has field offices located at primary markets, which are in charge of specialists and supervised by central purchasing offices in New York, and maintains divisional warehouses throughout the country, whereas the operations of Hill are confined to Louisiana, and chiefly to New Orleans.

"Under the statute, Hill is taxable at the rate of $30 per store, against $550 assessable against Atlantic & Pacific."

Secret Rebates Cited.

Justice Roberts went on to assert the answer is found not alone in the specific findings of differences between the two companies, but also in "the general finding that addition of units to a chain increases the competitive advantage of each store in the chain." Thus, he said, in 1932 the A. & P. from its vendors received "secret rebates, allowances and brokerage fees amounting to $8,105,000, which were demanded by the company as a condition of purchasing from the vendors in question." Divided among the company's stores, this was $530 for each store, or almost as much as the tax imposed by Louisiana, the opinion pointed out.

Intrastate Commerce Tax.

Justice Roberts further pointed out that the tax "is laid solely upon intrastate commerce" and added that "in the exercise of its police power the State may forbid, as inimical to the public welfare, the prosecution of a particular type of business, or regulate a business in such manner as to abate evils deemed to arise from its pursuit."

"Whatever a State may forbid or regulate it may permit upon condition that a fee be paid in return for the privilege, and such a fee may be exacted to discourage the prosecution of a business or to adjust competitive or economic inequalities," the jurist declared. "Taxation may be made the implement of the exercise of the State's police power, and proper and reasonable discrimination between classes to promote fair competitive conditions and to equalize economic advantages is therefore lawful.

"If in the interest of the people of the State the Legislature deemed it necessary either to mitigate evils of competition as between single stores and chains, or to neutralize disadvantages of small chains in their competition with larger ones, or to discourage merchandising within the State by chains grown so large as to become a menace to the general welfare, it was at liberty to regulate the matter directly or to resort to the type of taxation evidenced by the act of 1934 as a means of regulation."

Incorporation Elsewhere.

"The appellants (the chain stores), by incorporating in some other State or by spreading their business and activities over other States, cannot set at naught the public policy of Louisiana. The claim is, essentially, that even if local evils flow from the appellant's methods the State cannot control those evils because its power is limited to conditions created by the members of the chain found within the State. The conclusion is that the State must treat these stores as if they were something different from what they really are, since to do otherwise would be to reach beyond the borders of Louisana for the measure of the tax.

"The argument answers itself. The policy Louisiana is free to adopt with respect to business activities of her own citizens she may apply to the citizens of other States who conduct the same business within her borders, and this irrespective of whether the evils requiring regulation arise solely from operations in Louisiana or are in part the result of extra-State transactions.

"It is not a denial of due process to adjust such license taxes as are here involved to meet the local evil resulting from business practices and superior economic force, even though those advantages and that power are largely due to the fact that the taxpayer does business not only in Louisiana but in other States."

Cotton Mill Asks Refund.

The suit over refund of the illegally collected AAA processing taxes was brought by the Anniston Manufacturing Co., operators of a cotton mill, to recover $269,854 paid as cotton processing taxes and as cotton floor stock taxes. In 1936 after invalidation of the AAA act Congress attached to that year's revenue bill a section providing the procedure for those seeking refund of the processing taxes.

Under this legislation refunds were to be paid only after claims were filed with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and after the taxpayer demonstrated he "has not been relieved" of the tax paid, "nor reimbursed therefor nor shifted such burden, directly or indirectly." The legislation provided for a review of the commissioner's findings through an administrative board and then for judicial review. The Anniston mill owners attacked this law as depriving them of their rightful claims.

This procedure the court held fully protected the constitutional and legal rights of taxpayers and afforded them a fair and adequate remedy for their complaint. The court further pointed out that "while the taxpayer was undoubtedly hurt when he paid the tax, if he has obtained relief through shifting of its burden, he is no longer in a position to claim an actual injury, and the refusal of a refund in such a case cannot be regarded as a denial of a constitutional right."

causes and cures, Traffic Director Van Duzer is prepared to summon offending drivers to his office for intensive questioning. By this system, he said, it is hoped that driver types may be analyzed and Washington streets may be freed of incompetency behind the steering wheel.

Each driver in a reported accident, under Van Duzer's plan, will be required to prove his driving ability and knowledge of the regulations before he again is permitted to drive.

His proposed method of dealing with highway recklessness is in line with Washington's current traffic safety movement. Van Duzer is a member of the special committee appointed recently to organize a permanent citizens' safety council in the District.

Under methods established in numerous Eastern and Midwestern cities by Lieut. Franklin M. Kreml, Evanston traffic authority, highway accidents have been reduced through a comprehensive analysis of crash causes and driver ability.

Personnel Lacking.

"We intend to get behind each mishap, learn how it was caused and, if possible, determine whether human or mechanical failure was to blame," said Van Duzer.

He pointed out, however, that his plan could not be placed immediately in operation. Lack of personnel, he said, would not permit efficient administration at present.

An increased working staff at the Department of Vehicles and Traffic, he indicated, would be necessary before details of his plan could be enacted. This, Van Duzer added, would take a supplemental appropriation from Congress.

During Lieut. Kreml's long study of accident types, he found numerous drivers were prone to mishaps. These drivers, under his accident prevention system, were "called on the carpet" and forced to undergo rigid oral, written and practical examinations on driving fundamentals.

Van Duzer also suggested that the age limit for securing operators' permits be raised from 16 to 18. Young and inexperienced drivers, he said, figure in a large percentage of the city's annual accident toll.

Representative Nichols' taxi liability legislation is similar to previous bills in that it provides for limitation of the liability on any one judgment to $5,000 for bodily injuries or death and $1,000 for property damage.

Carriers would be permitted to file with the Public Utilities Commission either bonds or insurance policies.

The Nichols bill is an outgrowth of one of the hearings on District tax proposals. Harry C. Davis, of the Independent Taxi Owners Association, urged the insurance law be enacted.

Under the Nichols measure large associations of cab operators would be able to file bonds much more cheaply than independent cab operators could take out insurance policies.

2 Children Injured By Autos; Hit-Run Driver Is Sought

Two children were seriously injured last night, one by a hit-and-run driver.

Jean Riggin, colored, 4, 215 K street northwest, was struck by a taxicab as she was crossing the street in front of her home. Hurled through the air by the impact of the car, she was taken to Freedmen's hospital suffering from a fractured skull, a fractured right leg and internal injuries, police said.

The driver of the car was being sought at a late hour last night.

The other, Richard Day, 6, 124 E street northwest, is in Casualty Hospital suffering from concussion of the brain and a possible fractured skull suffered when he was knocked down by an automobile on Constitution avenue between Delaware avenue and First street northeast. Joseph S. Rosasco, 47, 414 Eleventh street, driver of the car, was released after questioning.

Kentuckians Honor Senators at Dinner

Senators Alben W. Barkley and Marvel Mills Logan were guests of honor last night at a dinner given by the Kentucky Democratic Club of Washington at the Mayflower Hotel.

Both lawmakers spoke and praised the work of the club and of the party.

Marshall E. Vaughn was the presiding officer, and J. Gregory Bruce was chairman, while Marvin McIntyre, secretary, was toastmaster.

More than 200 Kentuckians attended. Fornie B. Ladd, who helped to arrange the affair, was called home by the death of his father. He left by air for Kentucky.

Young Girl's Clothes Like Big Sister's

Dresses for Youngsters on Par With Others in Style.

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

The following article is one in a series by The Post Fashion Editor who is surveying summer style trends at their sources in the merchandise markets.

NEW YORK, May 17.—It's fun to be young this season, as clothes for the younger generation have as much style and are as fascinating as to materials as those for mother and older sister. The active, growing girl needs plenty of clothes for sports—sturdy materials, but designed with a maximum of attractiveness, as well as comfort and practicality. She also needs an extensive array of dress-up frocks, such as sheers and gay prints, made of cottons which are treated to stay crisp looking and launder without shrinking.

Styled for Growing Girl.

Clothes for the growing girl from 12 to 16 are often a problem and need to be chosen with judgment and discrimination. A girl in this age range wants and should have clothes which are smart and yet not too mature, and at the same time, not too young in styling. If she is exceptionally tall and lanky, the problem becomes more acute; line and skirt length are of tremendous importance, or she will look as awkward as she usually feels. The phychology of dress in this instance affects her poise and carriage.

Dotted Swiss, cotton voile, pique, gingham, seersucker, lawn, powder puff muslin, broadcloth, cotton gabardine, are some of the more popular fabrics used by designers for growing girl frocks, suits and sportswear this summer. The color range includes the pastel tints, brilliant colors in prints, dots and stripes, and dusty tones. One-piece frocks are a good choice for the short girl; two-piece when she is tall and wants to appear shorter. Both stylings are considered smart in the juvenile fashion picture.

Simplicity Is Keynote.

Simplicity should be the theme throughout the wardrobe of the growing girl. This does not mean, however, that dresses lack style interest—they definitely don't this summer. There are Southern Belle influences, dirndls, ballerina skirts, quaint square necklines, tiny high collars, shirtmaker costumes, boleros and bolero-effects. Trimmings include lingerie touches, novelty bias banding, grosgrain bows and belts, contrasting slide fasteners, patent leather bows and belts, unique or conventional buttons.

Broad-brimmed hats of straw with streamers down the back (adults have copied this idea), are grand to accompany any of the new juvenile fashions. Calots, those brief little French skull caps, are clever and amusing to complement sports outfits; also, gay cotton bandanas tied around the head, peasant fashion.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

WE REMEMBER too many hand-to-hand combats we have had with old time folding beds and even such simple things as chair-tables to get all hot and bothered about their space saving virtues. Yet we must admit that the innovations that have been added lately to this type of furniture rather take all the wind out of our prejudices. And we are practical enough to admire the ingenuity with which modern manufacturers have conquered the problem of living comfortably in a small area.

We think brides might investigate with profit the trend toward table-and-lamp combinations. The trouble with efforts in the past was that one or the other of the combination always seemed to be slighted—either the lamp was impossible for reading or the table was too dinky to hold even a decent sized ash tray. Lately we have seen excellent combinations of large, round pie-crust tables with really handsome lamps poking themselves up through the middle. A very satisfactory answer to the lamp and table situation in a small living room.

Then there are these amazing living room-dining tables that open, by turning this and that, into beautifully proportioned dining tables for seating a dozen guests. This is no trick piece of furniture by any means, for it may very well form the center of a lively federal dining room later on. Bridge type tables that become respectable dining tables for six or eight are happy thoughts too.

As to making a bed appear where none was before, that old magician's trick used to fall flat when neither the sofa nor the bed it became were comfortable. But today you may buy sofas, love-seats and studio couches that are not only luxuriously sittable in their sofa phase but are definitely sleepable in their bed phase. A pet of ours is a love-seat in perfect proportions which, miraculously enough, opens into a full size double bed.

Now we're hoping that some bright manufacturer will see the possibilities of the enchanting shaving stand that the Good Albert uses in one of the more touching scenes of Helen Hayes' "Victoria Regina" and start producing these like mad.

Smart for the Growing Girl

Gaily-printed muslin makes this attractive afternoon dress for the girl from 12 to 16; the unusual pouf sleeves, neat scallop-banding finish, and bolero effect, are distinguishing features. The material has been sanforized (pre-shrunk); consequently will launder satisfactorily.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Though She Loves Him, Bride Thinks of Divorcing Husband Because of His Temper and Abuse.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a college graduate, 24 years old. My husband is just the same age. We have been married a little over a year and most of the time has been spent unhappily. I believe my husband to be absolutely true to me where women are concerned; he never throws away his money foolishly nor stays out late at night without me. He doesn't go any place unless it's agreeable with me.

* * * *

Yet, on the other hand, he is very easily angered and picks flaws with everything I say. If I try to explain he says I'm trying to be smart and then he curses me to everything and says he's sorry he ever married me and drives me out of the room to go home. (I don't go.) I can neither smile at nor talk with a man without his thinking I am making a date. After a quarrel, if I don't display affection the same wrangle starts again.

* * * *

I have taken this treatment until I'm a wreck, so nervous and afraid that he will embarrass or strike me publicly, as he has done several times. Now, Miss Haworth, I love my husband and I'd be willing to do anything to get along. I know I have peculiar ways and don't feel like talking but I've never been unfaithful to him. He says he gets angry because I don't talk much to him. Do you think that a reason for abusing me? I am contemplating a divorce and would like to hear from you before leaving him. (We have no children, by the way.)

DISGUSTED.

A Similar Case.

DEAR DISGUSTED: Oddly enough, I talked just the other day with a widow (and I am sure she will forgive my betraying her confidence to this extent), who has only the most gratefully tender memories of her ten years' marriage to a man whose worst—and only—fault was a violent, uncontrollable, unpredictable temper. Incidentally, she is still young (in her thirties), decidedly attractive to men (as well as wise in their ways) and socially sought after.

* * * *

The early years of her marriage were just as miserable as your first year has been—and for much the same reason. She tried in every way to mend her husband's temper; she was meekly apologetic; she was strongly indignant; she agreed, she coaxed, she lectured, she wept, she threw things; she exerted every mental and emotional acrobatic to get control of the man and the situation. And she found her every effort unavailing. He continued to fly into rages about anything and everything—if and when the temper seized him, which was not every day, nor even every week, but far too often to be endurable—or so she thought.

* * * *

Then one day she sat down to a quiet session with herself. She decided to list the liabilities and assets of her marriage and her husband, to find just where she stood and what she ought to do about it. She found, in the assets column, just about what you have: a faithful husband whom she loved, a devoted and constant companion, an excellent provider with a sound money sense. And in the liabilities column—a violent temper which she was powerless to combat. Too wise to ask for perfection in a husband, she decided she was blessed above the average in what she had, and that it was up to herself, and herself alone, to make the marriage go.

* * * *

She decided, in her case, what could not be cured might well be endured. And from that day forth she proceeded deliberately to cultivate a deaf ear to her husband's tantrums, resolved that they should nevermore provoke an emotional response in her. It was not long, she told me, until it was an absolute physiological fact that she actually did not hear what he said in his rages—although she knew from past experience that much of it undoubtedly must have been pointedly directed at herself. Not hearing, she was her usual self when the storm had passed. And an unusually warm-hearted, high-spirited, good-tempered, vivacious, understanding and tolerant self it is.

* * * *

It became her greatest concern to console him through the periods of anguished self reproach which followed his outbursts. "It was a sickness," she said. "At such times he was sick with a chronic, incurable sickness." By this diagnosis and treatment she routed the only enemy which threatened her marriage; found real, enduring happiness with her husband, and today gratefully cherishes the superlative tributes he paid her at the last, for having managed their mutual life so wisely and successfully.

* * * *

So, since you love your husband, I suggest you give her method a trial before calling quits. Though you are miserable with him, you might be even more miserable without him. Instead of trying to make him over, try making yourself over to fit the situation—for a while at least. (It's axiomatic, you know, that all reform begins within; that you cannot reform a man's faults after marriage; that you simply have to take him "as is," for better or for worse, or discard him altogether.) It's possible if you stop tilting with his weapons (or a feminine version of them) that his tempers will become less vicious, less pointedly directed at you. An attitude of unruffled serenity, tinged perhaps with a certain gentle, affectionate concern, may constitute the saving oil on troubled waters.

* * * *

If he is jealous of other men, avoid tete-tetes with them. Give him your smiles, your animation, your whole attention. If he wants you to talk, unlimber your tongue and let it wag at both ends. Don't rest on the oars of your fidelity. That, after all, is (or should be) as a matter of course and taken-for-granted contribution to marriage. Making this marriage go is your job. Can you lick it, or is it going to lick you? I daresay you've never held down a real job of any kind. Any professional berth worth having and holding and developing present challenges neither more nor less serious than this.

* * * *

)Who masters his job and makes it serve his creative ambitions must cannily discover its possibilities and its pitfalls and conduct himself accordingly. In every circumstance of any way of life there is always the difficult human equation to be dealt with. When you divorce one man for one set of faults, you are up against the)proposition of going alone through life or pledging yourself to still a new set of failings. And aside from chronic alcoholism, callous infidelity, financial incompetence and downright insanity, a husband can have no faults which an intelligent, resourceful, determined wife cannot deal with handily.

* * * *

Physical maladjustment may be the cause of your husband's irritability. If one or both of you were to consult a psychiatrist or a physician with psychiatric insight, you might find that emotional repression or dissatisfaction prompts your husband's anger and blows. You may be failing him in ways you don't even guess. He may be too inhibited to broach the truth, or he may not suspect the truth himself. Naturally, physical abuse publicly inflicted cannot be tolerated by any self-respecting woman who knows beyond the shadow of a doubt that she in no way invites it; just as no normally balanced man would mete it out whatever the seeming provocation. But don't give up the ship until you know positively that he, and not you, is altogether at fault. The success of your marriage demands your very best efforts, which I am quite sure you haven't put forth yet.

Tomorrow's Problem.

Three problems will be considered here tomorrow. The first is that of a young mother who wishes to become a journalist and speculates the value of correspondence courses of study. The second is the case of a 23-year-old mother, living apart from her husband but not divorced, who wonders if she should accept the attentions of another young man. The third is a girl's graduation problem.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Treatment for Burns.

Most accidents which require first aid, as we said yesterday, occur in the home, and even of these by all odds burns are the most frequent. It is not only the cook or housewife who is subject to these, but also children. In fact, scalds of a serious kind are more frequent than burns. The effect on the skin is just the same with a scald or burn.

Of a little over 200 domestic accidents which involved scalds or burns, the causes were as follows: Hot water, 97; fire, 35; hot coffee, 19; firecrackers, 4; hot soup, 4; lye, 3; hot lard, 3; stove, 6; hot milk, 2; hot gravy, 2; cleaning fluid, 2; gunpowder, 2.

In the treatment of burns it is well to remember that practically all of them are serious. It is true that the extent rather than the depth of a burn is the measure of its seriousness. Burns may be fatal for one of three reasons: (1) the loss of the function of the skin—of excretion, perspiration and regulating the temperature of the body; (2) a change in the blood, and (3) toxemia from the absorption of destroyed tissue.

I was sent once, a great many years ago, to the scene of a railway accident in which one of the cars had caught fire and a number of people were severely burned. There was a trained nurse on board who was the only passenger to keep her head, and she ordered olive oil from the dining car to be used as a dressing for burns.

Good Treatment Then.

That was good treatment in those days, but she might better, in the light of our present knowledge, have ordered tea that had been boiled to be used, poured over the burn and covered with a sterile dressing. If nothing else is available, grease or fat or oil gives a considerable amount of comfort.

The tannic acid treatment for burns, which is very widely used today, was suggested first by Edward C. Davidson, of Detroit, in 1925. He found that tannic acid forms a more or less stable compound with the protein constituents of the body fluids and cells. When a dilute solution of tannic acid is applied to a burn surface, it exerts its astringent effect upon the most superficial tissues, coagulating there and thereby preventing further penetration into the deeper structures. The use of tannic acid converts a burn in a short time in what is practically a sterile wound.

Burned patients, under tannic acid, suffer less from toxemia and are almost immediately relieved of pain.

Tannic acid is a brownish powder, readily soluble in water, and often is sprayed on the burn in the form of an atomizer.

As tannic acid is present in tea leaves, this is the reason I say a boiled solution of tea is the best dressing that is available for domestic purposes until the doctor arrives.

Doll Collection Teaches World Peace

Underwood & Underwood.

MRS. McDONALD DOUGLASS

displays her famous collection of costumed dolls which she has gathered from all parts of the world. This is not a hobby but rather an educational collection used to teach children to be friendly with boys and girls of other nations. Mrs. Douglass has worked with education departments, chambers of commerce, missionaries and government officials of the countries in making the collection.

International Peace With Dolls Is Goal of Alexandria Educator

Mrs. Macdonald Douglass' Noted Collection Is Used to Acquaint Children With the Folk of Other Lands.

By Rebekah Blake.

BUSY HOUSEWIVES and mothers reading daily of a world threatened with war often think "if I could only do something for peace." There is something such women can do—something very simple. It is to introduce their boys and girls to children of other nations by means of dolls.

Such a formula for international friendship is approved by Mrs. MacDonald Douglass, 16 Washington Terrace, Alexandria, Va., who has a collection of dolls representing every country in the world.

It was not a desire to be merely a collector but rather an ambition to foster international friendship that led to Mrs. Douglass' large and unique collection. She says, "I am far too busy to collect these dolls as a hobby."

20 Years an Educator.

Mrs. Douglass has been in educational work for the last 20 years. As a kindergarten teacher, she attended a conference for international fdiendship in Europe. At this meeting, it was emphasized how teachers could promote world peace by introducing children to folk songs, dances and games of other countries. On her return to America, Mrs. Douglass discussed these plans with her daughter, Miss Kathleen Douglass, now in charge of the Douglas kindergarten in Alexandria. They decided that a more effective way to promote friendship between American children and those of other nations would be by means of dolls dressed in the authentic costumes of their countries. Children could better understand dolls and their clothes than games or stories. Consequently she began her doll collection which has brought letters to her from dignitaries and officials of every country, including Queen Marie of Rumania. Mrs. Douglass had a photograph of the Queen with the doll that she presented to the collection. This doll, one of the most beautiful of the group, is in authentic Rumanian costumes, elaborately embroidered by hand.

In the kindergarten, when a country is brought up for study, the dolls from that country are displayed to the children. The children do not think of these dolls as toys, but rather as playmates to be treated with love and respect. The hair, clothes, and often the features of the dolls are explained so the children get a clear conception of the appearance of the foreigners. The boys and girls are taught that the foreign children are friends and should be treated as such. For several days the pupils pretend they are from the country under study and they try to live as the natives do, while at school. Because of the extensive traveling Mrs. Douglass and her daughter have done, and their knowledge of the other peoples, they are better able to explain customs and habits.

With the co-operation of the United States consular service in foreign countries Mrs. Douglass has been able to collect more than 300 dolls. They range in size from ¼ of an inch to 1 foot. The average size is about 9 inches. These dolls are delivered from merchants or private citizens and are examined by the Government for their authenticity before they are shipped. The letters sent with the dolls are kept in files as proof of their origin.

Without the aid of the governments such an invaluable collection would have been impossible. The contribution from the Aborigine of Australia is the only model of its kind in existence and many months passed before this order could be filled.

In many cases the doll itself is not from the country it represents, but its hair is dressed in suitable style and, if possible, its features are true to its nationality.

The dolls are made of beeswax, rags, wood, bamboo, wax, china and composition and are dressed in paper, leather, feathers, beads, lace and cloth.

Dolls from different tribes in Africa are carved from wood and dressed in leather by the natives and authenticated by missionaries. One doll, made by a native child, represents his conception of his missionary. It is crudely carved of wood and dressed in paper. The hair is made from corn silk.

Two From Ecuador.

Two dolls from Ecuador were made by the Indians and dressed in native costume. Each is carrying on its back a basket containing miniature chickens.

Dolls from Zanzibar represent different castes of that country.

It was difficult to obtain the doll from New Zealand because it is dressed in Kewee feathers and it is now unlawful to kill these small birds.

Perhaps Mrs. Dougless' idea for a collection of foreign dolls started when she was a child. She has always had a liking for anything of miniature size and confesses she wouldn't be nearly so interested in the collection if the dolls were large ones.

Mrs. Douglass says "the dolls create a friendly, kindly interest and high regard in our children for people of other countries and their mothers appreciate this fact in stressing world friendship."

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, May 17.

ONE of the mementoes we all brought back from the New Mexican dash was a dance—and at my time of life! Our Eastern party fell under its odd spell at the fiesta given for us at the La Fonda Hotel in Santa Fe, where the light fantastic was tripped with unparalleled violence by one and all, maddened by the lights, the music, the wine and the local belles and beaux in fancy Spanish dress.

ALICE HUGHES.

This type of hopping is called the "Varsoviana" and is a very gay and graceful business, indeed. Our New York newspaper girls went for it like mad, and as it can be learned in one easy lesson, they soon were doing the little number with all the verve of old settlers. Some of the men became mighty good at it, too, which made for a good time all around.

The story is, and it seems borne out by the name, that the dance is a Polish importation. Now, just who would carry a simple dance from Warsaw to the Far Southwest of America, and then have it taken up and established as the favorite step of the area, I have never been able to find out. But there it is, danced to a repetitious but very pleasing tune—nice to watch and nice to do.

I studied the "Varsoviana" pretty closely that evening, noticing something very familiar about the dance. And as I was executing my third or fourth whirl on the floor, it all came back to me! It is almost identical with the dear old "schottische" that I used to perform at high school hops back in Manchester, N. H.! Didn't some bright soul crack about nothing new under the sun? But it's a fine dance, this Polish-Spanish-American fandango, and we alumni and alumnae of the Santa Fe "Super-Chief" preview are going in for it largely!

* * * *

A week or so ago I mentioned that the Piccadilly Hotel here was running a breathless contest to think up a more dignified name than "waitress" for those who lug in the ham and. Now the result is announced to a world on tip-toe. It is "Servette," suggested by a town girl named Rita McKenna, who won the $25. So call the servette whenever you want more butter, please. Let's have no more shouts of "Miss!" or even "Hey, you, please!"

National Director Speaks At Sisterhood Luncheon

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
Post Club Editor.

MISS JANE EVANS, young executive director of the National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods, embracing a membership of 55,000 women, yesterday afternoon was guest of honor and speaker at the third donor luncheon of the Sisterhood of Eighth Street Temple at the Shoreham Hotel.

Taking as her subject "The Supreme Paradox," Miss Evans pointed out that women who cannot find an hour in which to study paths which lead to preservation of peace will give their entire time to war work in periods of conflict.

"Men and women," she declared, "are not willing to sacrifice for peace that which they are willing and anxious to give in time of war." She urged enlightened thought on ways to avoid war. Her address was not a plea for disarmament or any special means of arbitration, but rather one for an awakened consciousness of the folly of strife in a world where it is said that "the man in the street" in every country desires peace.

Miss Evans, who was chosen to speak because of her outstanding leadership among Jewish women of the Nation, spoke with appeal to reason rather than emotionalism.

Mrs. Frederick Pelzman, president of the Sisterhood, presided at the luncheon, and Mrs. David Simon, who, with Mrs. Herbert Rich, was cochairman of the affair, introduced the speaker. Others at the head table were Mrs. Benjamin Brill, who received an ovation from the membership for the success of the recent rummage sale she conducted; Mrs. Arthur Neuman, Mrs. Samuel Schwartz and Mrs. Jerome Saks, members of the luncheon committee, as well as Dr. Abram Simon, rabbi of the temple, with Mrs. Simon, founder of the National Sisterhood and honorary president of the Eighth Street Temple Group; Col. Julius Peyser, president of the congregation, and Mrs. Peyser, and officers and past presidents.

The latter included Mrs. Martin Mendelsohn, Mrs. Max Goodman, Mrs. Martin Baum, Mrs. Morris Cafritz, Mrs. Fedora Jonas-Lewis, Mrs. David Bornet, Mrs. Levi David and Mrs. Samuel Pack.

Among the distinguished guests at the luncheon was Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, who was there with Mrs. Marx Hahn. Mrs. Mark Lansburgh, president of the National Council of Jewish Women, also was present as were Mrs. Arthur Stephens and Mrs. Alexander Wolf, member of the national board of the council, and Mrs. Charles Goldsmith, vice president of the Community Chest.

The invocation was offered by Mrs. Simon, and Dr. Simon and Col. Peyser were both called on for brief remarks. The Assistant Rabbi of the Temple and Mrs. Norman Gerstenfeld were unable to be present as they left yesterday for New York and are sailing for Europe tomorrow.

Music included a group of three songs sung by Marie C. Deal, soprano, accompanied by Elsie Harvey Weaver. The closing feature was a one-act play presented by a Sisterhood member, dealing with the amusing problems of a small culture club as seen in a typical meeting. Mrs. Morris Cafritz had the role of the English poet who was to be the speaker; Mrs. Gustave Ring, that of the maid; Mrs. Jessie Miller, the club secretary; Mrs. Martin Mendelsohn, the president; Mrs. Gilbert Hahn, the program chairman; Mrs. Burnett Baer, Dinah, the colored cook, and Mrs. Cecil Kaufmann, Mrs. Theodore Peyser, Mrs. Fay Firestone, Mrs. Albert Small, Mrs. Ralph Goldsmith, Mrs. Max Wertheimer and Mrs. Maurice Salomon were members of the club. Mrs. Maurice Kafka was the stage manager and Mrs. Earl Klein directed the play.

The luncheon tables were decorated with spring flowers, many of them from the gardens of Mrs. Schwartz, who was chairman of decorations. In the center of the speaker's table was a low bowl of red and white peonies. Mrs. Pelzman wore a black frock with a design of red carnations, and a large red straw hat which corresponded with the shade of the flowers. Miss Evans wore a tailored black costume, her small hat tipped on one side of her head, and a corsage of gardenias.

The Rector's Aid Society of St. Margaret's Church will hold its annual spring card party at the Shoreham Hotel this afternoon at 2:30.

Miss Eleanor Fitts, executive chairman, will be assisted by the following members of the board: Miss Caroline Smith, sister of the rector; Mrs. Joseph Wall, Mrs. Willoughby Chesley, Mrs. Donald B. MacLeod, Mrs. A. D. Newman, Miss Helen Mulliken, and Mrs. C. W. Nickless. The ladies of the society will act as hostesses.

Sisterhood Members Entertain at Luncheon

Harris & Ewing.

Mrs. Gustave Ring, left, had the role of the maid in a humorous one-act play presented yesterday afternoon at the donor luncheon of the Sisterhood of Eighth Street Temple at the Shoreham Hotel. With her in the scene are Mrs. Martin Mendelsohn, as president of the culture club; Mrs. Burnett Baer as Dinah, the colored cook, and Mrs. Morris Cafritz, as Lady Fitz Roy, distinguished English poet who was to address the club meeting.

Two Kentucky Senators Feted

Many Notables Attend Party Given for Barkley and Logan.

Speeches (but not the dull kind) were a feature of the testimonial dinner given last night by the Kentucky Democratic Club of Washington in honor of Senator Alben W. Barkley and Senator Marvel Mills Logan in the ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel. Mr. Marvin McIntyre presided as toastmaster following the opening of the program by Mr. Marshall E. Vaughn, president of the society, and Mr. J. Gregory Bruce, chairman of the dinner committee.

He began by commenting that he did not need to say how proud he was of being a native Kentuckian—"it's a weakness we've all got." Later, introducing those at the head table, he explained some of them were "not so hot" because they are not from Kentucky. Then followed the talks by the two Senators, who included good-natured jibes at one another which kept the dinner guests laughing.

With the guests of honor, president, chairman and toastmaster at the speakers' table were the Attorney General, Homer S. Cummings; the Postmaster General, James A. Farley; Mrs. Barkley; the Solicitor General and Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse H. Jones, Mrs. Benton McMillin, Miss Frances Settle, former Gov. and Mrs. A. O. Stanley of Kentucky, Mrs. McIntyre and Mrs. Vaughn.

There was music during the dinner by an orchestra and the Wilson Quartet, which sang familiar numbers, including "Wagon Wheels." Senator Logan's favorite song. The program closed with the singing of "My Old Kentucky Home."

Members of the committee, in addition to Mr. Bruce, were Mr. John L. Grayot, Miss Minnie Mahler, Miss Mae Helm, Mr. Hamilton Alexander, Mrs. James Breathitt, Mr. Cassius M. Clay, Mr. Marion Klutey, Mr. Lorenzo Martin, Mr. William Jennings Price the Solicitor General and Mrs. Reed, former Gov. Stanley, Miss Lela Mae Stiles, Mr. South Trimble, jr., and Mr. Donald Walker.

THE ROTARY ANNS, who always have a good time when the Rotarians are conventioning, will find a round of entertainment awaiting them in connection with the meeting of Rotary International in Nice, France, June 4 to 12. Most of the Rotarians going from Washington will be accompanied by their wives and daughters.

Dr. Harrison E. Howe, who is director of the International Governors' Assembly, meeting in Montreux, Switzerland, preceding the convention in Nice, will be accompanied by Mrs. Howe. They are sailing Thursday aboard the Corinthia with Mr. and Mrs. George W. Harris and their daughter, Miss Aileen Harris. Mr. Harris has been sergeant-at-arms of the International Governors' Assembly ever since it was formed, 21 years ago.

Other Rotarians and Rotary Anns convention-bound are Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Dodge, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Swope and their daughter, Miss Marcia Swope; Mr. Richard Lamb and his daughter, Mrs. Winifred Peters; Mr. Grant Leet and Mrs. Ethel Ward, executive secretary of the Rotary Club, who are sailing May 22, aboard the Roma; Mr. and Mrs. Burton Leary and their nieces, the Misses Mary Sleman and Virginia L. Compton, and Mr. and Mrs. Beverly Smith, who are sailing May 29, on the Rex.

Mr. Swope, former vice president of the Washington club, is its incoming president.

THERE'S A BIT of story connected with the presentation of a colonial doll to the Woman's National Democratic Club at its luncheon Saturday. Mrs. Donnelly Reed, who has been president of the Woman's Jeffersonian Club, of Kansas City, ever since it was organized eight or ten years ago, is a dancer and had been invited to come to Washington and dance the minuet at the fete at Woodlawn. She was unable to come but members of her club sent the doll, a miniature replica of her in minuet costume, to be placed in the national clubhouse. The doll was presented by Mrs. Robert P. Hill, wife of Representative Hill, of Oklahoma, who for four years served as vice president of the Jeffersonian Club.

"Queenie," who remained in the background during the luncheon, although silhouettes of a little donkey who looked much like her decorated the place cards at the head table, evidently pricked up her ears as Mrs. Hill read the little poem attached to Dollie Reed's dress. Just as Mrs. Hill came to the last verse, a bray from "Queenie" was heard.

It was a day for blue at the party. Not only did the First Lady wear it, but also both the Secretary of War and Mrs. Woodring, host and hostess; and Mrs. Oscar Underwood, owner of Woodlawn, who was a guest. Mrs. Underwood, by the way, is returning to her estate, which the Woodrings are giving up the first of June after two years' occupancy.

THERE WILL BE an innovation at the breakfast of the Political Study Club Wednesday in honor of Mrs. Roosevelt—a man is to open the program. John Henry Marville, barytone, will sing "The Star Spangled Banner," with Lewis Corning as his accompanist. In former years there have been women soloists, but this time Mrs. Edward Campbell Shields, the program chairman, thought it would be interesting to hear a stirring bass voice singing out "long may it wave."

Graduates Of Wellesley Entertained

Miss Belle Sherwin, Trustee, Gives Tea at Her Home.

Miss Belle Sherwin, alumnae trustee of Wellesley College, yesterday afternoon entertained members of the Wellesley College Club at a tea at her home in Georgetown.

Spring flowers decorated the rooms, not large bouquets but two tall sprays of handsome salmon gladioli in a vase on one table; a cluster of white peonies in a crystal bowl on another, four graceful red tulips in a round vase on another. Only on the tea table in the dining room was there a large bouquet and that was formed of yellow daisies and blue cornflowers, suggestive of the artistic flower design in the chiffon gown worn by the hostess.

Receiving with Miss Sherwin, who is one of Wellesley's most distinguished aulmnae, were Mrs. Harry B. Caton, president of the club, and Mrs. George I. Snowden, vice president. The guests were greeted in the drawing room and went through the tiled vestibule, from which doors open onto the veranda into the dining room. There doors were swung wide at one end onto a little balcony overlooking the garden and brick terrace below.

Among the guests was Mrs. Gerritt Miller, who returned only last week from Panama, where she spent the winter with Dr. Miller, collecting everything from animals and birds to reptiles for the Smithsonian Institution. With her was another Wellesley graduate, Olive Bond Nelson, of New York, professionally known as Olive Bond, who is presenting a concert tonight at the Arts Club, with Frederick Bristol as her accompanist. Her program will be the same she gave recently at the Women's University Club, in New York. During her stay she is the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Miller.

Mrs. Henry I. Stahr, wife of the president of Hood College, and Dr. Mabel Lowell Bishop, of the Hood faculty, also were there, as were Miss Martha Morrow, Mrs. Joseph D. White, Mrs. Lewis H. Flint, officers of the club; Mrs. Beveridge J. Mair, Mrs. Dwight G. Howerth, Mrs. George L. Meleney, Mrs. Donald F. Roberts, Mrs. Arthur S. Field, Mrs. Hamilton Alexander, Mrs. Laurence C. Staples, Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, Mrs. Lyman B. Swormstedt.

The club has a committee member for every school in Washington, public or private, to inform students of Wellesley's program and give any information they desire.

Jewish Relief Society Closes Season Tomorrow

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Jewish Consumptives Relief Society of Denver will conclude its activities for the season with a Mother's Day paid-up and new membership tea tomorrow at 2 p. m. in the Jewish Community Center. Admission will be by paid-up membership card.

The committee in charge is headed by Mrs. Robert Klein, Mrs. Barney Krucoff, Mrs. A. Levenson, Mrs. E. I. Levinson, Mrs. Samuel Robinson and Mrs. Louis Whall. The highlight of the afternoon will be a one-act playlet, "Meeting to Music," under the direction of Mrs. E. I. Levinson.

Readers Club Season Closing This Evening

The Readers Club will have its last business meeting and public reading this evening at 8:30 in the alliance room of All Souls Church, Sixteenth and Harvard streets. Officers will be elected and annual reports presented at the business session.

The program will include readings by members who have not previously appeared before the club, and music by Miss Thelma Elizabeth Grant who will sing accompanied by Mrs. William Pearson. Hester Walker Beall will be guest speaker of the occasion, talking on "Poetry Interpretation."

National Jewish Home Luncheon to Be Today

The donor luncheon for the National Home for Jewish Children in Denver will be given today at the Mayflower with 600 guests attending. Senator Edwin C. Johnson, of Colorado, former governor of the State, will be guest speaker and Mrs. Charles Goldsmith will present a check for $3,000 which is to go to a camp for children in Washington. Mrs. Albert Jackson, president of the Washington branch of the Home, will accept the check for her organization.

First Lady Is Planning Slower Summer Tempo

Meanwhile, She Christens Airplane, Receives Belgian 'Unofficial' Envoy, Visits Children and Entertains Women.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

ALMOST any time now, the indefatigable First Lady is going to call a halt on her activities. "For the next few months, at least," she said yesterday at her press conference. She hasn't "the remotest idea" where or how she will spend the summer, but she is promising herself "a peaceful time."

Meanwhile, her schedule yesterday showed no signs of slowing up, and the little black book in which she keeps her engagements apparently is as full of parties and appointments as ever.

Yesterday morning, she had her first fling at christening an airplane and found it takes plenty of practice to break two bottles of champagne without splashing the contents all over one's dress. In the afternoon, she entertained at tea in honor of the graduating classes of local schools.

• • • •

LATER, she received Belgium's "unofficial ambassador of good will," Mme. Claire de Hedevary, of Brussels, who is in America on a lecture tour. A few minutes after she left the White House, Mme. Hedevary said of the First Lady: "Oh, but she is marvelous! No photograph does her justice. Her blue eyes . . . her personality . . . her hospitality—I wish I could express in words how much I admire her!"

Mme. de Hedevary, an author who is known in her country as "Christophina Columbo" — because she "discovered America" for her readers in Belgium on a previous trip to this country—has been received by crowned heads in a number of European nations. "I tell you, not one of them is one whit superior to your First Lady," she said.

AT NOON today, Mrs. Roosevelt will go to Red Cross headquarters to receive a book recently translated into Braille, and at 2 o'clock she will visit the Weightman School for Crippled Children. Later, back at the White House, she will receive three groups of women—at 3:30, the Women's Democratic Club, of Forest Hills, Long Island; from 4 to 5, some guests at a garden party, and after that, the Colonial Dames.

Tomorrow morning at the State Department at 10 o'clock, she will take part in opening the telephone line from the United States to China, and will talk for a few minutes to Mme. Chiang Kai-sheck and Mrs. H. H. Kung, wife of the minister of finance in China. The veteran's garden party at the White House is on the calendar for tomorrow afternoon.

POST-GRADUATE pupils of the Todhunter School will be guests of Mrs. Roosevelt on Friday and Saturday and will go with her to visit a number of resettlement projects, beginning with the one in Greensburg, Pa., and ending in Greenbelt, Md. On Sunday night, May 23, Mrs. Roosevelt will leave Washington for West Liberty, Ky., where she will dedicate the high school built by the Friends' service committee through the aid of the WPA. On her way back to the Capital, she will stop at Arthurdale, resettlement community in West Virginia, for the formal opening of a new shirt factory.

THE mystery of whether Mrs. Roosevelt follows the pattern cut by some previous First Ladies in consulting astrologers and fortune tellers was cleared up by her yesterday. She does not plot her life by either the stars or lines in her palms. Not long ago, however, she did receive at the White House a woman whose specialty is analyzing palms. She took an impression of Mrs. Roosevelt's hand for future study, but what she found the First Lady does not know yet. "I find it amusing to have my hands told," said Mrs. Roosevelt, "but I certainly don't take it seriously."

WHEN Miss Ethel du Pont marries Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., on June 13 the entire Roosevelt family will be on hand to witness the ceremony in the church in Greenville, Del.

Mrs. Roosevelt said yesterday that her son, Elliott, and his wife who will leave the White House for their home in Texas this week will return for the wedding. Mr. and Mrs. John Boettiger will come from Seattle. James Roosevelt, secretary to the President, and John, youngest Roosevelt son in Harvard, will also witness the wedding.

• • • •

THE President's mother, Mrs. Sara Roosevelt, accompanied by John Roosevelt and his friend, John Drayton, of Boston, nephew of the William Phillipses—will sail for Europe on July 3. While the young men take a motor trip over the continent, the President's mother will visit her sister, Mrs. Dora D. Forbes, in Paris. They will join her there later and come back across with her.

The MERRY WHIRL

By Marylyn

INTO TOWN to attend the dance at the Italian Embassy Saturday evening came Countess Daisy di Carpenetto, Italian novelist, who went back to New York yesterday.

Known far and wide as the "Italian Edna Ferber," this lovely woman with dark eyes and dynamic personality can sing the praises of Il Duce hours on end.

"I have known him—oh so long," she said. "He has done so much for Italy. He is a great man!"

The countess also can discuss at length her impressions of America and American women, gleaned over a period of several months she has spent in this country. Without a second's hesitation she will tell you American women abroad have had the wrong kind of publicity. She will tell you further, as she told us: "They are not bold, bossy and badly dressed as some Europeans report them to be. "Not the ones I've met, anyway. Instead, they are modest, poised, and so accustomed to their freedom they take it as a matter of course."

As she sees it, most American women have a dual personality. "They are busy bees by day and butterflies by night," is the way the countess expressed her opinion.

BUT BACK to the countess herself, anyone who glimpsed her at the Italian Embassy Saturday probably never would have guessed she herself was "a busy bee" most of the time; that her name is on the spine of nine novels and two plays and that she has written a number of short stories and newspaper articles, to boot.

She didn't say so on her latest trip to Washington, but when she made a brief visit here last September, she admitted she had come to visit this country hoping to gather material for another book "with an American woman as the heroine."

THE Patrick J. Hurleys are back at Belmont Farms, their estate near Leesburg, Va., after spending some time in California. Seen at a recent party, Mrs. Hurley was in an all-black ensemble, set off with a wide-brimmed hat, was the cynosure of all eyes. In other words, as stunning as usual. The Hurleys will be at Belmont until July 5, when another trip westward is scheduled.

YOU know how it is when you are reading something and you come to the first word in an oft-repeated phrase—you just know without going any further what it is going to say——Well, the other day Representative Edith Nourse Rogers received a letter from a constituent and came upon what undoubtedly was going to read—"you are the best angel that ever lived," but carefully perusing the lines the Congresswoman came upon—"You are the best angel that ever died"

Representative Rogers is still wondering just what was meant by that.

Athletics Down Yankees, 3-2, on Dickey's Wild Throw and Regain League Lead

NATS STAGE 2-RUN RALLY IN 8th TO TURN BACK RED SOX, 4-3

This Morning

Well, Well! Here's Mr. Bell Himself.

By Shirley Povich.

The rest of the league may never be able to thank me enough for this, and I admit it's a dirty trick on Beau Bell, himself, but with the young man in our midst for three afternoons, starting today, I am constrained to take him as my topic. I say it's tough on Bell because one flattering remark by this department and the recipient always begins to play like a bum—or a team of bums, as the case may be. Yesterday I noted in this space with some emphasis that the Yankees were now squared away, were in front, and would probably stay there for the rest of the season. They promptly get themselves knocked off by the Athletics and lost the lead.

POVICH.

Coincidentally I mentioned that it wasn't in the books for Connie Mack's young pitchers to keep up their winning habits, and what happened? Nothing except that young Lynn Nelson, in a relief role, shut the Yankees out over the last eight innings while the A's were winning the ball game.

* * * *

And if you must know, it was shortly after this department's off-hand remark to the effect that Zeppelin travel was here to stay that the Hindenburg came down and went up in smoke. In fact, I'm the guy who said the horseless carriage was a passing fancy—here today and gone tomorrow.

* * * *

And so I say it's tough on Beau Bell that I am reduced to taking him as my text for today. From this date the poor fellow may be under an unholy hex. If he doesn't get another ball out of the infield all season, well, it won't be remarkable.

* * * *

But up to this date, Roy Chester Bell, of the St. Louis Browns, has been a swell young ball player, one of the most sensational rookies ever to come into the American League. And when he steps up there at the plate in the clean-up hitting role for the Browns this afternoon, Washington folk will be gazing upon the young man, who is leading all the league's hitters.

* * * *

He's batting .462 now and the league's pitchers are having a terrible time of it getting him out. He's big a six-foot-two, 185 pounder who hands the ball an awful thumping when he lays the wood to it. Beau Bell has come to be something of a menace in the league—surely the greatest young ball player the Browns have come up with since they signed a young pitcher out of college named George Sisler.

* * * *

They're playing him in the outfield now, but he can step in there and take a pretty turn at first base, if the occasion demands. When the venerable Jim Bottomley's aging dogs were yapping for surcease last summer, Beau Bell did a better than tolerable job at first base for Rogers Hornsby.

* * * *

Like Sisler, the Browns got Bell out of college, too. They grabbed him fresh off the campus at Texas A. & M. and shoved him into the line-up of their Galveston (Texas League) farm. They couldn't recall him fast enough when he started belting the ball for .337 figures down in Galveston and the next season they had him in a big-league suit.

* * * *

Last season was his first full big league campaign and he proved himself about as brittle as the Commerce Department Building, playing every game on the schedule. At that, they couldn't take a .344 hitter out of the line-up. Because that's what Beau Bell hit last season—.344, the ninth best hitter in the league.

* * * *

But somehow, the guy never did get the proper acclaim. Fellows like myself for some reason were too busy digging up the superlatives to attach fore and aft Joe DiMaggio's name. Roy Chester Bell was shockingly overlooked, we discover at this late date.

Actually he outhit DiMaggio by 21 points last year in the first season for both of 'em in the majors. DiMaggio couldn't do much in the field that Bell couldn't do, either, but Beau's chief sin apparently was that he played for the Browns, who were never a pennant factor.

* * * *

But the fact remains that if DiMaggio qualified as a sensation this fellow Bell is something of a super rookie. Even his presence with the lowly Browns can't hide the guy's talents. But there's one group that isn't underestimating Roy Chester Bell. The league's pitchers know him only too well, and apparently it's vice versa.

'Scuse me, Beau.

Racing Official Dies.

New York, May 17 (AP).—Edward C. Smith, horse racing official familiar to followers of the sport throughout the Nation, died of coronary thrombosis today at his hotel apartment in Jamaica. He was 71 and had officiated only last Saturday at Belmont Park on Long Island.

Error in 8th Gives Macks Pair of Runs

Gomez's Good Pitching Futile; Nelson Halts New York Drive.

Philadelphia, May 17 (AP).—The Athletics, capitalizing on a wild throw in the eighth inning by Catcher Bill Dickey, put over two runs to halt the Yankees and Lefty Gomez, 3-2, and go back into the American League lead by a half-game margin today.

Bob Johnson beat out a hit to lead off the fateful inning and, with two out, Skeeter Newsome sent him to third with a single to center. Johnson and Newsome then attempted a double steal and Dickey, with Johnson trapped between third and home, heaved the ball into leftfield.

Johnson scored with the tying run and Newsome, who had gone to third on the misplay, clattered across the plate a moment later with the winning marker on Chalmers Cissell's two-bagger.

Nelson in Star Role.

Though Gomez, who now has won three and lost three, started off in great shape with four strike-outs in the first three innings, it was the A's relief pitcher, Lynn Nelson, who stole the show.

Taking the mound in the first after Frank Crosetti had greeted Luther Thomas with a homer and Red Rolfe and Tom Henrich had followed with singles, he allowed one run and checked the Yanks the rest of the way. Nelson struck out seven, retiring Lazzeri, Gomez and Crosetti on nine pitches in the sixth.

The crowd of 7,860 raised the three-day series attendance to over 60,000.

Jacobs Hurls 3d No-Hitter

Richmond Wins Va. Title by Routing V. M. I.

Richmond, Va., May 17 (AP).—"Bucky" Jacobs, diminutive University of Richmond righthander, today pitched his third no-hit game of the 1937 season as his team defeated Virginia Military Institute to win the State college championship.

Jacobs walked one man and two opponents got on base on errors.

His previous no-hit games were achieved at the expense of Virginia Tech and Hampden-Sydney College.

The crowd swarmed on the field today as the last out was scored in the regulation nine-inning game and bore Jacobs off the hill on their shoulders for a tumultuous parade on the campus.

Mrs. Chandler Medalist in Atlanta Golf

Helen Dettweiler Shoots 87; Marion Miley Is Runner-up.

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, May 17.—An Attractive brunette from the Lone Star State, Mrs. Dan Chandler, of Dallas, outstroked a classy field today to win the qualifying medal of the women's Southern Golf Tournament for the second straight year.

The long-knocking Texan, competing in the twenty-sixth annual event over the course where the Southern players organized their association in 1911, took the trophy with a fine 77, just three over par, in a battle with one of the fastest fields in history.

She was only a stroke in the wake of the record qualifying mark of 76 made by Mrs. Marion Turpie Lake, of New Orleans, in 1930 and the field represented an entry list of 129, surpassing the previous high at Fort Worth in 1933. Slender Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., a semifinalist in the Women's National, was runner-up to Mrs. Chandler with a 79, trailed by 17-year-old Dorothy Kirby, of Atlanta, thrice Georgia champion, and Mrs. Frank Goldthwaite, of Fort Worth, who deadlocked for third place with 80's.

Blonde Helen Dettweiler, of Washington, D. C., and Martha Daniel, of Rome, Ga., finished with 87's and Mrs. George Wilson, of Miami, Fla., was next with an 88.

Judges Award Scott Draw With Williams

Archibald Stops Gunn in 6th; De Angelo Takes Decision Over Green; Saia and Bullock Win in Preliminary.

By Bill McCormick.

Charles (Hobo) Williams, who is without a peer in local 160-pound circles, stepped out of his weight division last night at Turner's Arena to batter Russell (Buddy) Scott for 10 rounds and prove to the satisfaction of all but a duo of fight officials that he is the best light-heavyweight in the District.

The fight officials, who viewed the efforts of Scott through rose-colored glasses, if they viewed the fight at all, phenagled the vote around until the result was declared a draw.

Pacing himself beautifully, Williams took Scott completely by surprise. Instead of tearing in wildly at the outset, The Hobo boxed nicely for the first two rounds, which he won easily as Buddy was trying to figure out the strange tactics.

In the third, Scott began sharpshooting, piling up a slight margin as Williams swung wildly—and missed just as wildly. The fourth and fifth were much the same, as Williams idled and conserved his strength for a rousing finish.

In the seventh, Williams opened up a bit and had a nice lead until Scott wiped it out with a crashing right. The eighth went to Williams as he shook Buddy to the heels with a right then followed up to win the round decisively.

The ninth was even, as Scoot shot his load. Came the tenth and Williams put the bout on ice—to the satisfaction of everyone but the official deciders. With instructions to give his all, he did, battering Scott mercilessly. Just to make matters more decisive, he almost dropped Buddy with a crashing right to the heart. At the finish Williams was fresh and Buddy was badly wilted. That is the story of the fight.

Williams scored his points by taking the lead and ramming home both fists in vicious arcs. When he allowed Scott to take the lead, the Hobo fared not so well, but he did not allow Buddy to take the lead very often.

Joey Archibald knocked out Lawrence Gunn in the sixth round of a scheduled 8-round semifinal. In the trio of sixes, Frankie DeAngelo won from Joey Green, Billy Bullock outpointed Benny Kessler, and Frankie Saia won from Joe Spangler. All these decisions were unanimous.

Lee Pitches 6-Hit Game; Reds Beaten

Cubs' Hurler Wins Third Game of Season; Frey Gets 3 Hits.

Cininnati, May 17.—Bill Lee won his third game of the season today and ended a two-game losing streak when the Cubs turned back the Reds, 5-2, with six hits. Defeat also ended Cincinnati's two-game winning streak.

Frey with a triple and double, and Galan with a double and single, paced the Cub attack off Moore, Davis and Grissom.

Simmons' Home Run Evens Score in 6th; DeShong Wins Duel

Hits by Hill, Lewis and Kuhel and Higgins' Wild Throw Wipe Out Boston Lead; Nats' Star Outpitches Ferrell.

By Shirley Povich.

Washington's down-trodden Nats reared up suddenly in the eighth inning yesterday, wiped out a one-run deficit and rudely snatched a 4-3 ball game from the Red Sox.

At the time, the Red Sox were fondly regarding the scoreboard figures, which showed 3-2 in their favor. But then the Sox started to come apart at the seams and Washington rushed over the tying and winning runs in rapid order.

Third Baseman Frankie Higgins threw in a suicidal bit of baseball to encourage the Nats in their eighth-inning uprising. Pouncing on a topped roller down the third-base line, Higgins flung the ball into Section A, Seat 4, of the right-field boxes far beyond the reach of Jimmy Foxx and Jess Hill, who authored the hit, scurried to second base on the error.

Lewis Beats Out Bunt.

Buddy Lewis took up the heroics for the Nats then. He laid down what was intended to be a sacrifice bunt, but it was such a perfect effort that he beat the throw to first for a single and Hill was on third with none out.

Joe Kuhel was the next hitter—and he hit. With the Red Sox infield playing close in, Kuhel bounced a high-hopping single over Wes Ferrells head, past second base and out into centerfield, and Hill was home with the tying run.

Meanwhile Lewis was scampering to third. There wasn't much enthusiasm among the Ladies Day gathering when Johnny Stone bashed a tame grounder to Shortstop Eric McNair, but then things became downright exciting.

McNair gathered in the ball, took a precautionary look at Lewis, who made no motion toward dashing for the plate, and then heaved it to Foxx at first to retire Stone, but Lewis was only kidding. He was off for the plate as McNair threw and he arrived there ahead of Foxx's relay with a vicious slide—and Washington won the ball game. It was pretty cute.

Simmons Also Played.

But it probably should have been mentioned long before this that Al Simmons was out there slugging again yesterday. In fact, Simmons put the Nats in the ball game at a time when Washington's hopes were lower than the Lusitania.

Wes Ferrell had been making muggs out of the Nats with his four-hit pitching and the Sox were breezing along with a 2-0 lead in the sixth. The Sox were wiping the Washington athletes off the bases with four double plays and before it was over they had recorded a fifth to approach within one of the all-time league record.

Washington, as I was saying, was trailing, 2-0, when Simmons came to bat in the sixth. Johnnie Stone was on first base, with two out, having arrived there on a force play after Kuhel had beaten out an infield single.

Well, anyway, Simmons hit a home run—a great, big home run that tied the score. It was, as the saying goes, well tagged. It knifed through a gale that was blowing toward the plate and climbed over the left field bleachers' wall, disappearing into an areaway in the concrete. The temperamental Ferrell chucked his glove high in the air in his disgust, stepped on it and then went back to his pitching.

Mention also should have been made before this of James B. De Shong, who was out there pitching a considerable ball game for the Nats. In fact, De Shong allowed only seven

Scott Blocks One—for a Change

Buddy Scott, left, who was handed a draw with "Hobo" Williams last night at Turner's Arena, manages to block one of "Hobo's" lefts in the second round of their bout. He didn't block many, but that made no difference to the judges, who gave him a draw anyway.

Joe Fungy, York, Pa., and Frank White Win Pro-Amateur With 65 Best Ball

EASTERN WHIPS WILSON, 8-1; TECH DEFEATS CENTRAL, 5-3

Barnett's 68 Is Low Pro Score

Mel Shorey Finishes in Money With 3 Partners.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Joe Fungy, a visiting professional from the Outdoor Club, York, Pa., paired with Frank White, of the Capitol Golf Club, and won the Middle-Atlantic pro-amateur event at Washington yesterday, the pair carving out a best ball of 65 over the hilly Ballston layout.

Bob Barnett, the Chevy Chase mentor, won the pro-sweepstakes event with a card showing 16 fours and a pair of duces for a 68, two under par. Four birdies dotted Barnett's card, and he was over par only on the second hole of each nine.

After playing the first 8 holes in even 4's, Bob holed a putt virtually the length of the ninth green and scored his second birdie 2 of the day on the fourteenth hole when a 15 footer curled into the cup.

Barnett and John Brawner tied for second in the pro-amateur with Mel Shorey, East Potomac, and Ed Merkle, the Union Printer champion. Shorey was out in 39 but scored 4 birdies on the second nine for a 33 and a 72. Merkle carved two strokes from par on the fifteenth hole, scoring a birdie 4 and aided by a stroke handicap.

Shorey's 72 tied Leo Walper for the runner-up berth in the sweepstakes, each holing birdies on the last hole for their score. A quadruple tie for third place in the pro amateur existed between Shorey and Richardson, Shorey and Phil, Walper and Patterson and Al Houghton and Calvert Dickey.

Shorey's back nine 33 enabled him to figure four ways in the prize money.

Fungy's victory was his first in seven years competition in the P. G. A. events. He entered without an amateur partner but picked up White on the first tee and it was a stroke of luck as White was aided by a three stroke handicap and used each of the strokes in addition to three birdies that dotted his card.

The winning pair was six under par for the first seven holes, but Fungy three-puted the eighth to lose a stroke to par and they took a 4 on the par 3 ninth hole. White's par on the fifteenth hole, where he received one of his handicap strokes, was equivalent to a birdie and Fungy added another on the next hole, nearly holing his second shot. They had par in for a best ball of 64 at this point but faltered with a bogey 5 on the finishing hole.

Gaithersburg Downed By Montgomery Blair

Aided by four home runs, Montgomery Blair High swamped Gaithersburg, 14 to 5, yesterday on the Blair diamond. Sills, first baseman, cracked two of the circuit blows, including one in the fifth with the bases full. J. Orrison and Von Friedly, of Blair, also connected for the circuit.

Levi Yoder Favored In Manor Invitation

Over 400 Golfers Start Play Today; Columbia Women Play for Hinshaw Trophies; George Graham Paces Radio Open.

Manor Country Club's fifth Invitation tournament, with Levi Yoder, the Kenwood ace, in the role of defending champion and heavy favorite, starts today with a field upward of 400 golfers competing for the J. Webster Manning trophy.

The woody Norbeck course was played by more than half the field yesterday in practice rounds, including Harry Pitt, Frank Allan, Bobby Brownell, Yoder and others.

The event winds up the Capital's three-week Invitation tourney spree, Woodmont and Chevy Chase preceded the Manor affair and Yoder was victor in each one. The near-record entry list is an indication of the popularity of the Manor event, the city's favorite tourney.

With Roger Peacock virtually the only outstanding golfer of the District not entered, the low scoring record of the 1935 event, when 78 and 79 shooters only made the third flight, may be broken. Pitt, Stevinson, Burrows and Yoder, the four former titleholders, are all entered.

Columbia Women Play For Hinshaw Trophies

Mrs. H. M. Brundage, jr., with a 97, and Mrs. Merrill Lord, with a 99, paced the Columbia women golfers in the play for the Wade W. Hinshaw trophies yesterday, the first of four 18-hole medal rounds.

High winds played havoc with a majority of the participants and unusually high scores resulted. The second round will be played Friday.

George Graham's 75 Paces Radio Open

George V. Graham, with a card of 75, turned in the low score in the first qualifying flight of the National Capital Radio Open sponsored by Gordon Hittenmark, WRC's timekeeper, at Kenwood yesterday afternoon.

Low qualifiers yesterday besides Graham and their scores, R. E. Weaver, 77, Abe Abrams, 77 G. Vass, jr., 78; A. H. Wilhelm, 78; Bob Morris, 82; J. P. Stanton, 80; J. Fleming, 82; B. Higgins, 82; F. Donahue, 81. The last three are members of the Georgetown University golf team.

Departmental League Tennis to Start Today

Washington's largest tennis league, the Department circuit, opens its twenty-third season today with 4 of its 15 clubs seeing action. Works Progress Administration meets Census Bureau on the Monument courts and Department of Agriculture faces Public Works Administration on the Potomac Park courts at 5 p. m.

Other teams in the league are War Department, Interstate Commerce Commission, Federal Credit Commission, Department of Treasury, Navy Yard, Procurement Division, Census Bureau; National Parks, Veterans' Administration, Patent Office, Social Security and General Accounting Office.

Approximately 225 players will compete. Each match will consist of five doubles matches to be held Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays. The league closes August 19. Maj. C. W. Christenberry has been elected president; Arthur Attwood, of General Accounting Office, vice president, and Winfree Johnson, secretary-treasurer.

15 Blues in Catch At Willoughby, Va.

Fishing at Willoughby, Va., last week with Dave Roberts, Virginia warden for that section, Judge William S. Snow, Alexandria member of the Virginia Fish and Game Commission, caught 15 blues, weighing up to 12 pounds.

Larger catches were made by other boats in the vicinity. Herring were used for both bait and chumming because it was impossible to obtain bunkers. Reports of lower baymen show the fish to be in the section between Lynnhaven Bay and Willoughby, and, so they say, headed up the bay.

McPoland, Relay Star, Leaves G. U.

Georgetown's hopes for a record-breaking mile relay team next winter have all but vanished with the departure of Jim McPoland, crack anchorman of the quartet which was hailed as one of the East's swiftest during the past campaign. McPoland, suspended by the school for an infraction of rules, is in New York and contemplates transferring to New York University in the autumn.

Colonial Netmen Win Over Delaware by 5-3

George Washington's netmen added another scalp to their belt yesterday, that of the University of Delaware, which they defeated by a 5-3 score.

District Grid Players Listed on All-Star Poll

Catholic University Leads List With Six; Team to Meet Philadelphia Eagles in Exhibition Game August 24.

Washington schools, Catholic University particularly, are well represented on the list of eligibles for an all-star team to be selected by popular vote, which will meet the Philadelphia Eagles next autumn, but University of Maryland men are ignored completely.

Modeled after Chicago's all-Americans vs. National League champions game, the Philadelphia replica is certain to attract a galaxy of outstanding collegiate talent, and the Eagles are strong enough to make a good game of it. How Maryland's Bill Guckeyson and Johnny Gormley were overlooked, however, is a matter for conjecture.

Backfield men selected from this area are Joe Glodeck and Bill Adamaitis, Catholic University; Bob Ferrara, Georgetown, and Frank Kavalier, George Washington. Roy Hanken, the Colonials' great wingman, is the only end nominated.

Joe Yanchulis, greatest center in Catholic University history, and Mike Fuardo, Georgetown, are nominated at that post, with "Smoky Joe" Anthonavage, of Catholic, the only guard selected.

All three schools are represented at tackle, George Washington by Dale Prather; Catholic by Sam Pagano, and Georgetown by Al Vaccaro. Ed Clements, of Catholic, received a bid, but notified the newspaper sponsoring the game that he would be unable to play if chosen.

The game will be played August 25, with the men chosen for the college team scheduled to commence training August 4.

Feller Tries Arm, Ready for Action

Cleveland, May 17 (AP).—Pitcher Bob Feller took a workout today, and afterward Manager Steve O'Neill, of the Cleveland Indians, said he was "100 per cent" recovered from the arm injury which has kept him out of the game three weeks.

O'Neill said Feller would go East with the Indians, who were idle today, and would pitch before the end of the week. The manager expressed belief he would not start Feller in a game immediately, but would use him as needed to complete a game.

Mt. St. Mary's Defeated, 6-2, By Colonials

Late Rally Wins for D. C. Nine; Lanier Goes Full Distance.

Emmitsburg, Md., May 17.—A well-timed scoring punch that produced four runs in the last two innings, carried George Washington University's baseball team to a 6-2 victory over Mount St. Mary's in a well-played game today.

Bill Lanier, Colonial hurler, held the home team well in hand after the second inning when the Mounts scored both of its runs, allowing only seven hits. He fanned seven and walked five.

Two-base hits by Johnson, Edmondson and Zelaska, and a double steal engineered by Johnson and DeAngelis featured the visitors' attack.

Nats Beat Boston, 4-3, on Late Rally

hits and was annoyed far more by the walks he issued than he was by the Sox' hitting. He passed seven.

Mel Almada was his particular tormentor. The Mexican outfielder banged a triple against the right-field wall in the second inning to score Jimmy Foxx, who had walked. After the Sox got their second run, which evolved from Dallesandro's double in the fifth and Cramer's wind-blown single, Almada broke a 2-to-2 tie in the eighth with another triple against the right-field wall at a time when Higgins was on base by virtue of a walk.

That put the Sox in front, 3 to 2, and you know what happened after that.

Cronin, Hit by Ball, Escapes Fracture

Boston's Red Sox were a leaderless team yesterday with Manager Joe Cronin confined to Georgetown University Hospital with a painfully bruised face suffered during the pre-game practice.

Cronin unwittingly walked into the path of a ball thrown forcefully by Third Baseman Frank Higgins and was struck high on the left cheek. He was accompanied to the hospital by Clark Griffith, his father-in-law.

X-ray pictures revealed no fracture but Cronin's face was severely bruised. He was discharged from the hospital last night and will return to the Red Sox line-up tomorrow.

Amateur Boxing Card Announced

Seven of the eight bouts that are to comprise the all-star amateur boxing card at Duffy Stadium in Seat Pleasant next Friday night have been arranged.

The outstanding bout, and one which offers great local interest, will find El Brookman, recently graduated from the lightweight ranks, doing battle with Steve Mamakos, the Golden Greek, who holds the District 147-pound championship.

In the 175-pound division, Tom Jordon will take on Norman Pemberton and a 150-pound clash will find Jack Booker, of Fort Myer, making passes at Ike Fones.

Kline Shackelford will perform against Bill Miller in the lightweight class, while Baker Vermillion and Junior Dalton are slated for action in another welterweight contest.

In the bantamweight division Bernie Hardy will engage Tony DeToto and Charles Cox will attempt to smack over Johnny Williamson in the 150-pound class. Mike Morton, one of the District's better lightweights, will show on the card against an opponent yet to be named.

Fischer on Mound As Browns Invade

Carl Fischer will make his 1937 pitching debut for the Nats today when the St. Louis Browns open a three-game invasion at Griffith Stadium. The curly-headed southpaw was claimed by the Nats from the Indians a week ago.

Manager Rogers Hornsby is expected to pitch the veteran Elon Hogsett against the Nats, thus making the pitching unanimously left-handed.

GAME THURSDAY.

Tech vs. Western, at Roosevelt.

By John R. Vosburgh

Eastern High barged to within one short step of the interhigh baseball championship yesterday. A one-hit pitching job by Walter Stockwell and nine enemy errors combined nicely to give Coach Charlie Guyon's braves an 8-to-1 conquest of a sadly weakened Wilson squad on a wind-swept Eastern diamond.

At the same time, Tech High was propelling itself into second place in the series with a 5-3 victory over Central at Central stadium. It was the Maroons' third series win against one defeat.

Eastern's victory was its fourth interhigh win in four starts and leaves only Roosevelt, thus far an also ran, in its path to the title now held by Western. Minus the services of its ineligible ace pitcher, Kilmer Bortz, and its regular second baseman, Ray Deuhring, also ineligible, Wilson offered only passable resistance.

Fifteen hundred students turned out for the game but the gale which whipped the field into a dust-storm midway in the game forced most of them home.

The lone Wilson hit was a well tagged double to distant left by Bill Hawksworth in the second inning, scoring Buck Barbee from first. This gave Wilson a 1-to-0 lead, but Stockwell's 12 strikeouts served to prevent further scoring by the Green and he and his teammates quickly attended to Eastern's run-making.

Eastern tied the score in the second when Lee Lusby was safe on Ralfe Mesrobian's error, was safe at second when Mesrobian dropped Barbee's throw and scored when Paul Kober pounded a single to right field.

The Lincoln Parkers added four more in the fourth when they picked up four of their 11 hits off Bill Garland, who pitched a creditable game on the whole. There would have been no scoring at all in this inning but for a pop fly by Kober over second which Mesrobian and Centerfielder John Stevens absentmindedly watched drop for a scratch hit.

This happened with two out after Chick DiGiulian had singled and stolen second. He scored on the play, Marshall Jacobs followed with a single, Al Kidwell walked and Wes Taylor cleared the bases on a drive to centerfield which Stevens failed to snare.

Stockwell, who had retired the side on strikes in the sixth, filled the bases on walks in the ninth. Then he forced Garland to pop to first and Dean Deurhing to roll out to the same spot to end the game.

Tech's victory came after Central had knocked "Abe" Linkins out of the box in the second inning. Tommy Doonis replaced him and yielded five hits to the finish. With the count standing 2-2 in the seventh, Tech knocked Wilbur (Dizzy) Dezerne out of the box with a 3-run winning rally.

Hagerstown Opens Today With Full Fields

Track Holds Md. Record For Choices

41 Per Cent of Races in 1936 Were Won by Favorites.

By Walter Haight.

With the roar of the Preakness crowd still tingling in their ears and the memorable War Admiral-Pompoon stretch battle still quickening their hearts, Maryland turf followers will turn to the trim Hagerstown track today for the sport of kings. From the flat country, the racing shifts to the rolling hills of mid-Maryland, where the Hagerstown Fair Association will conduct racing for the next two weeks with the exception of next Monday, an off day.

Hagerstown has held a record for Maryland racing for two years and that includes tracks of all dimensions. The nature of the mark is one that has served to make the track popular with the bettors. For the last two years Hagerstown has led in the percentage of winning favorites.

41 Per Cent are Winners.

When 41 per cent of the choices win at a race session, one would believe that a race secretary would be satisfied. However, that is not the case with Edward J. Brennan, who makes up the programs at Hagerstown.

In discussing the meeting which opens today, Brennan said, "Forty-one per cent of the favorites won last year at Hagerstown and 43 per cent in 1935. I expect to do even better this spring, as I will have a better grade of horses and riders. If we can keep the track fast we may top our record."

While Hagestown's opening day program is not the best that Brennan could draw from the horses on hand, it is a better-than-average half-mile offering and presents full fields. Every race includes in the entries horses that competed at Bowie, Havre de Grace or Pimlico and the card is spotted with horses that won or were in the money at the major tracks.

Fleet Fillies to Clash.

The fifth event is the outstanding one on the program. It is a sprint of 5 furlongs for 3-year-olds and up and should provide some keen action. A pair of fleet fillies, Miss Epe and Timber Lady, are expected to draw the bulk of the backing. Both had creditable races at the Pimlico session. They will be opposed by six others, the fields at Hagerstown being limited to eight starters.

Post time for the first race will be 2 p. m., and for the first time the daily double will be conducted on the first and second races. The "double" windows will be closed at 1:45 p. m.

It's Poor Fishing Down Oregon Inlet Way

By Bill Ackerman.

The pendulum swings just as far one way as it does the other—no matter whether it be in fashions or weather—particularly is it true of fishing. This year Oregon Inlet is certainly experiencing the back-swing as against the peak catches of 1935 and 1936. According to boatmen and returning sports anglers, so far as it has gone 1937 can lay claim to the distinction of producing the poorest catches in many seasons.

Friday saw the catches of channel bass take a jump, the average size, however, was smaller than they have been.

Like the week preceding, Saturday was high day of last week, with the more than a hundred boats out, averaging close to 40 blues each, and with the similarity continued as to weight, for very few exceeded two pounds in weight. The few that did were from five to eight pounds.

The weather is perfect, with a light southwest wind—just what it takes to level down to comfortable going, seas that have averaged better than rough for the last several weeks. Now is the time to try Oregon Inlet (unless you want to wait until after July 1) if you can be satisfied with just ordinarily good sport. Almost every boat has open dates, due to the many cancellations.

Just what has happened to this fishing this year no one seems to know. Most of the guesses lay the blame on the almost continual northeast winds. The nets have, since the start of the run, continuously lifted the big eight and ten-pound blues and are still doing it, but for some reason or other they refuse to take surface lures.

The thought was expressed by Post Notes that if the big fellows failed to start hitting during the past week they would more likely be found moving up the coast. That seems to be the case (although as long as they remain in these waters there is always the chance that they will start biting) because Judge William S. Snow, of Alexandria, reported blues heavy with spawn as being in the lower bay. Just returned from Manteo on Friday, he left again the same evening to give them a whirl in the neighborhood of Old Point. The hope is that he will be able to bring the report that they are there in sufficient numbers to give local anglers a chance at some real sport.

Joe Fletcher tells us that the Potomac is again muddy after a slight clearing during the middle of the week, and that yesterday few fishermen were in sight. Some few rocks, the largest about 18 inches, have been caught during the last four or five days.

In New Jersey, licensed anglers are urged to take advantage of the pike and pickerel season as every pickerel taken before the bass season opens on June 15 will lessen the danger of big pickerel raiding the nests and taking more bass than probably any angler during the entire season.

This season, which opens on May 20, will give the wet and dry fly purist a long sought opportunity to indulge in his favorite sport. This midseason for pike, pickerel and pike-perch will remain open until November 30. The season is again opened for 20 days in January.

Trout fishing throughout Jersey this year has been more than successful because of the liberal re-stocking program of the Fish and Game Commission from the world famous Hackettstown Hatchery. Reports of game wardens show that anglers have been catching daily bag limits each time they visit their favorite waters.

The program of re-stocking trout in the streams will be continued until the season closes on July 15, so there will be no letup in the sport.

Men Past 40

Many men at 40, in perfect health, without an ache or pain, wonder why they aren't as strong and as vigorous as they were 5 or 10 years ago. Mental and physical fatigue is the cause in the majority of cases. Fortunately this condition can be helped by the use of a recently discovered hormone. This hormone stimulates the glandular system to greater activity—helps build up lowered vitality.

This hormone is now available, together with other valuable ingredients in Zo-ak Tablets (Blue Box for men—Orange Box for women) and are sold and recommended by Units Drug Stores and all chains. Zo-ak is the formula of a well known American physician so you can take it with confidence. It contains no nux vomica (strychnine) or any other harmful drugs. A booklet called "For Men Who Want to Live," will be sent in a plain sealed envelope by Zo-ak Co., 58 W. 45th St., N. Y. Ask for economy size. Save $1.

WHAT TOP-RUN MEANS

This diagram shows the curve of quality. It pictures how the peak of whiskey goodness is secured by cutting off the raw "heads" and the heavy "tails" —and taking only the best of the run to make Crab Orchard.

DOES TOP-RUN BOURBON REALLY TASTE BETTER?

You'll find the answer to that in your first warming glass of Crab Orchard. For every drop is TOP-RUN and full 93 proof. That means extra brilliance and sparkle—extra bead quality—extra flavor—extra strength. Test this TOP-RUN Kentucky bourbon with a taste—and see why Crab Orchard is such a great buy.

YOUR GUIDE TO GOOD LIQUORS

At The Post WITH BILL BENNINGS

Selections at Hagerstown.

Dear Al:

Did I hear somebody say that I was in my right class now? Well, there's not a War Admiral among the 400 horses stabled at this track but there's a possible thrill in every field and they use the same sort of money as Churchill Downs and Pimlico. Hagerstown customers can get just as excited about a stretch battle between two $500 platers as Pimlico's 40,000 crowd did about the Preakness. At that, it will be much easier to see a race and much less trouble to buy or cash a ticket. We are back in Clocker Mike's territory so I'm going to let him print his selections each day. I can't shift over here without confessing how wrong I was about the horse Matey. With many others, I believed that Matey was being eased along in his training with view to banging down with a sensational race in the Preakness. When his price showed at 16 to 1, as the field paraded to the post, I was tempted to send down a deuce on him. However, I held myself under control but, as I watched the race, I looked for Matey to break loose. You know what Matey did . . . nothing. He ran like a counterfeit two-bit piece. One of the pross-box boys said after the race that the Matey people were waiting for a price. Well, it was good time Pimlico, better time Hagerstown. BILL.

First Race—Jim Cornell ran a nice third to Bentaur, one that would be good enough to compete in Maryland stakes, at New Orleans last winter. Needs only to run back to that effort to defeat this sort of company. Scout Rose has a second at New Orleans as a recommendation. Unless one of the first-time starters has some class. Hydrangea should be third.

Second Race—Running Water was over his head on the big time tracks. Flashed speed one day at Havre de Grace and has had enough racing to be at tops. Top Shell sprinted twice at Pimlico with half-mile racing in mind. Should go well here. Dash In to complete the money bracket.

Third Race—Alahad has plenty of speed but little heart. However, she won at Pimlico at a longer route and likely will show to advantage at this sprint distance. Miss Adeline has been rested since Havre de Grace and appears to be the one to beat. Justa Jimmie has been away a long time but has speed.

Fourth Race—Rough Player is a veteran with a bit of class. That Pimlico outing was a conditioner. After several tries Barnstormer grabbed a purse on the big tracks. Dangerous among these. Sylvia G. is tossed in with a feather and is fit.

Fifth Race—Timber Lady looks like the best thing of the day. She stopped last out after setting the pace for some good ones. The route is shorter here. Miss Epe was beaten a neck in her last and promises to be a keen contender. Justa Gal for the show.

Sixth Race—Eleanor C., a front runner, may take the measure of the highly regarded Sun Way in this test. The filly won twice at Oaklawn early in the year and her last at Pimlico was encouraging. Tambov for the show.

Seventh Race—Pass was conditioned on the big tracks and may be ready to lead this sort of company to the wire. Minna and Reigh Tetrarch seem headed for the place and show awards.

Best Bet—Timber Lady.

Clocker Mike's Selections.

1—Shorts, Scout Race, Jim Cornell.
2—Running Water, Bokie B., Top Shell.
3—Tweety, Alahad, Sun Belle.
4—Barnstormer, Sylvia G., Chief Hollis.
5—Miss Epe, Lady Race, Timber Lady.
6—Sun Way, Eleanor C., Exaggeration.
7—Minna, Golden Play, Reigh Tetrarch.
Best bet—Sun Way.

Du Pont Votes Dividend of $2; 2nd This Year

Company Plans to Issue 500,000 Cumulative $4.50 Preferred.

By the Associated Press.

Wilmington, Del., May 17.—E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. today declared the second quarterly "interim" dividend for 1937 of $2 a share on the common stock, payable June 15 to stockholders of record May 27. The regular quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent ($1.50) on the debenture stock was also declared, payable July 24 to stockholders of record July 9.

Directors called a special meeting of common stockholders June 18, to act on a proposal to create 500,000 shares of preferred stock—$4.50 cumulative, without par value. This stock will be junior to the present debenture stock.

To Increase General Funds.

"It is anticipated," the company's announcement said, "that the newly created shares will be sold to underwriters for cash at a price to be determined later by agreement. Preliminary discussion regarding an underwriting has been held with Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. The shares will not be offered to stockholders and no rights to subscribe will be issued."

The proceeds will be placed in the general funds of the company.

"The company's cash and temporary cash investments at March 31, 1937," the statement said, "amounted to approximately $73,000,000, and it considers that any substantial reduction in this position would not be desirable.

"The company believes that it is prudent to raise additional new capital at this time to provide against the reduction of its cash funds, which it expects would otherwise take place over the next year and to provide against contingencies, such as higher prices, calling for great working capital."

Extra Dividends.

New York, May 17 (AP).—Directors of St. Joseph Lead Co., today declared and extra dividend of 50 cents and a disbursement of 50 cents, both payable June 21 to stockholders of record June 10. They also declared a dividend of 50 cents, payable September 20 to stock of record September 9. Three months ago a payment of 50 cents was ordered, while six months ago an extra of 25 cents was declared in addition to a regular quarterly payment of 25 cents.

Directors of Glidden Co. declared an extra dividend of 30 cents a common share and a regular of 50 cents, both payable July 1 to stock of record June 17. The company makes paints, varnishes and vegetable oils and has headquarters at Cleveland.

Celotex Resumes.

Celotex Corporation directors declared a dividend of 40 cents on the common stock, payable June 10 to stock of record May 28. This marks the first distribution since 1930 when $1.50 a share was paid. The company makes building insulating products and has headquarters at Chicago.

Search for Oil Under Water Enlists Capital

Millions Put Into Explorations Along Gulf of Mexico Coast.

New York, May 17.—Millions of dollars are pouring into the State treasuries of Texas and Louisiana as a result of oil companies "putting out to sea" in search for new coastal fields, it was stated today by J. Meyer, jr., & Co., who have just completed a survey of recent developments along the Gulf Coast.

"The quest for favorable oil structures under the waters of Terrebone and other Louisiana bays, Galveston Bay and the Gulf of Mexico involves payments of millions of dollars for leases and royalties to the States which own the oil rights on these water-covered areas," a statement issued by the firm said. "These payments are helping to lighten the burden of the taxpayers and to improve the credit position of the States.

"In Louisiana, oil fields developed on lakes and bays already have poured over $7,000,000 into the State treasury from leases and royalties. The State of Texas also has collected several million dollars by leasing under-water areas, the proceeds being devoted to a permanent school fund to educate its children. Leasing of these areas and royalties from fields developed on them eventually are expected to yield the State about $100,000,000.

Well a Mile Off Shore.

"The Humble Oil & Refining Co. has projected a well nearly a mile off shore in the Gulf of Mexico, and the Standard Oil Co. of California and the Salt Dome Oil Corporation, joint owners of about 69,000 acres of leases in Galveston Bay, shortly are expected to commence developing these holdings.

"Discovery of more than 90 oil fields along the Texas-Louisiana Gulf Coast since January 1, 1934, has added about 1,250,000,000 barrels to the Nation's oil supply. Geophysical exploration and deeper drilling are largely responsible for these developments. Prospects are being mapped with the seismograph and torsion balance which were impossible to locate by geological methods, and operators on the coast have demonstrated willingness to drill to depths of two miles in favorable areas. Several Gulf Coast fields are more than 8,000 feet deep, and two are producing from below 10,000 feet.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stock Prices Irregularly Lower in Slowest Trading in 2 Years; Bonds Steady.

New York, May 17.—Dullness was the keynote of securities markets. Government bonds were firm but inactive. Stock prices moved irregularly lower in a turnover of only about half a million shares, the smallest since April, 1935. July wheat declined an eighth of a cent to 118 cents a bushel.

In stocks the trading was remarkable only for its desultoriness. Activity was slight enough on Saturday, but if that were because of the absence of the home guards, still fewer of them must have visited Wall street today. For a five-hour session, the interest taken in the early market at least was the least that has been seen in the past year. Holidays closed the London, Paris and other Continental markets, and only the inveterate trader was abroad on this side. If dullness is pleasing to the authorities who now are attempting to dictate the market pace, the day was an ideal one.

Investment Interest.

A certain amount of shifting in speculative accounts is always taking place, but the market now is scarcely dominated by the short term trader. It is one in which the calculations of the investor rather than the hunches of the speculator are being brought into play. Recognizing the changing character of the market, brokers and professional advisers to speculators and investors are emphasizing dividends, the ratio of price to earnings, and corporation management, instead of distributing tips on short movements of stocks. Such a market is symptomatic of a far healthier condition than the sort of affair which created the illusion of great prosperity in the autumn and early winter, when the flood of dividends sent down the channel by the penalty tax on profits was sweeping prices up to new high levels.

Hope that the dull morning on the stock exchange would give way to a more lively afternoon had to be abandoned. Bonds as well as stocks dragged along without much price change and with thin markets. Week-end trade news was not striking and had little, if any, influence on prices, beyond perhaps that of failing to promote a rally. This week the steel industry, according to the American Iron and Steel Institute, will settle back to an operating rate of 90 per cent of capacity. Since strikes at some of the independent plants have interfered with operations, that excuse is accepted rather than that of declining activity among steel consumers.

It would be easy enough to make a case for dull markets from the increasing tension at Washington over policies, but that is far from a fresh influence on the markets. So far as anyone can guess from the developments of the past week the Administration's acts and those of Congress are going neither to help nor hinder markets in any different manner than they have for several months. The Supreme Court failed to decide on the social security law.

Preferred Shares Fall.

Only a handful of stocks broke out of the rut. Several preferred issues developed weakness and sank into new low ground on losses of 1 to more than a dozen points. Among them were American Power, Electric Power, New York Shipbuilding, Mullins Manufacturing, Spear, Twin City and Universal Leaf. Mathieson Alkali recorded a loss of 13 points on one sale. Common stocks to fall heavily on first appearance were Inland Steel, Hercules Powder and General Refractories. Pfeiffer Brewing was under pressure and 2 points were lost in reaching a new bottom. Rights to subscribe to additional stock expired last week.

Steel, Central, Chrysler and General Motors held within fractional distance of previous closing prices. Public utility shares fell to new low prices. Rails were easier, as were metal, oil, rubber and amusement issues. Tobacco hardened. Foods and rail equipment were mixed.

Pegging Prices.

A brief outline of the terms of the new Wallace scheme for controlling agricultural production under the guise of maintaining a high level of prices, indicates that, if adopted, it will end the controversy over the question of an American peasantry. Any suggestion that perhaps the current high prices for farm products involve an unduly high tax on consumers in favor of the agricultural producers usually is met with the rejoinder that, otherwise, the farmer will become a mere peasant—whatever that might make him. The new farm control bill might keep him economically above water, because of direct Treasury contribution and an indirect tax on consumers, but it would at the same time involve a complete surrender of his own initiative and prevent him ever from rising very high in the economic scale.

Consumer and Taxpayer Will Pay.

One good result of farm crop price stability might be to lessen the speculation in land, a penchant for which often has done so much to get the farmer into trouble, but that is by no means assured, for the farmer might produce more than ever, depending on the Government to take the surpuls off his hands in the form of loans. In any event the scheme is a highly complicated one and is certain to result in a demoralizing tariff policy involving quick changes in duties, to promote the permanent capture of foreign markets from American farmers, to pile up a huge surplus (in time) of farm products in the hands of the Govrenment and generally to be an immensely expensive undertaking.

It might as well be realized now as later that neither Wallace nor the so-called farm leaders have in mind a true "ever filled" granary plan. What they contemplate is a high minimum price, to be guaranteed by the Government, coupled with maximum effort at production. If the scheme does not work that way it will speedily sicken the farmer. It will, furthermore, serve as the first well forged link in the chain of complete Federal control of all forms of economic activity.

Steel Tonnage Total Highest in History

New York, May 17 (AP).—Total tonnage of steel in use in the United States has topped the 1,000,000,000-ton mark for the first time in history, the American Iron & Steel Institute reported today. The jump to the 1,000,000,000-ton mark was from a level of about 954,000,000 tons in 1935. The increase in 1936 represented not only the production of steel ingots, but also the great tonnage of steel in use in permanent service, such as buildings, bridges and pipe lines, installed during the early years of the century.

Odd Lots.

Numerous brokerage house accounts are now in "conservatorship," to borrow a term dear to the Comptroller of the Currency. The term, incidentally, covers that state in which liquidation of the assets takes place "on the quiet."

. . . The Whitsun holiday in London was offered as an excuse for the continued dullness on the Stock Exchange, but the daily passage of business between this and the London markets is now small on any days. Week-ends in London during the summer usually last from Thursday to Tuesday anyhow. . . . News was scarce enough and the remnants of a once strong speculative force could not be blamed for making the most of what appeared. The report that one of the motion picture producing companies would use colored films hereafter was used as an excuse for pushing the shares of Technicolor on the Curb. The shares rose a point or two.

Replenishing Capital.

Du Pont is the latest company to take steps toward replacement of working capital reduced by dividends made necessary under the penalty tax on undistributed profits. Under the old taxation system capital for ordinary plant improvement and expansion was obtained through the retention from year to year of a portion of the profits. Capital was secured, in other words, from the consumers of a producer's products. In declaring a quarterly interim dividend of $2 a share, Du Pont announced plans for the sale of 500,000 shares of a $4.50 yearly dividend paying preferred stock, to be created in order to replace money thus paid out.

Fifth Annual Life Insurance Week Begins

Meeting Is Addressed by Assistant Secretary of Commerce.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Officially opening activities of the fifth annual Life Insurance Week, Assistant Secretary of Commerce Ernest G. Draper addressed yesterday a meeting of 600 persons at the auditorium of the Department of Commerce Building. Speaking before an audience of civic leaders, business and professional men and women, Government officials and representatives of foreign governments, Assistant Secretary Draper reviewed Federal assistance in the promotion of life insurance which Secretary of Commerce Roper, in a message, commended for "its far-reaching contribution to the social and economic welfare of our country."

George L. Hunt, chairman of this year's committee for Life Insurance Week, responded for the insurance men, saying that life insurance has demonstrated its importance to national welfare in creating independence for families who accumulate life insurance ownership as carefully as other properties, and for those who use the annuity benefits of their policies after the need for family income has passed.

Following these speeches, which were broadcast over Station WOL and the network of the Mutual Broadcasting Company, the assembly was entertained by a preview of the new Paramount motion picture, "Make Way for Tomorrow," a screen version of Josephine Lawrence's prize-winning novel, "The Years are So Long."

Guerra Everett, chief, division of commercial laws, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, described the exhibition of industrial and graphic arts in the life insurance field which has been completed under his direction, and arranged by Suzanne Mullett, of the Corcoran School of Art. This exhibition is open to the public from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. daily this week in Room 3224, Department of Commerce Building.

The meeting was preceded by a luncheon at the Willard Hotel of members of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association, who are co-operating with the national celebration in Washington. Underwriters are offering their services to all owners of life insurance policies in explaining the advantages of arrangement and use to give maximum value to them. The entire week will be devoted to this service by association members.

The following members of the association attended the luncheon and pledge their services:

Cotton Is Lower With Liquidation

New York, May 17 (AP).—Except for slight opening advances, cotton was easier today under Wall street and New Orleans selling. October sold off from 12.63 to 12.44 and closed at 12.47 with final prices 8 to 11 points lower.

	High	Low	Last
July	12.81	12.61	12.66
October	12.63	12.44	12.47
December	12.60	12.42	12.46
January	12.63	12.46	12.48*
March	12.67	12.52	12.55

Spot, quiet; middling, 13.18.

*Nominal.

Cottonseed oil was steadier today on scattered covering and commission house buying promoted by firmness of lard which offset easiness of cotton. There was also some buying of September contracts against sales of lard. Final prices were 6 to 8 points net higher. Sales, 151 contracts. Bleachable spot, nominal; July, closed 9.92; September, 10.00; October, 9.91; December, 9.80.

Rubber Consumption Lower for April

New York, May 17.—Consumption of crude rubber by manufacturers in the United States for April is estimated to be 51,797 long tons, which compares with 54,064 long tons for March.

April consumption shows a decrease of 4.2 per cent under March and is less than 1 per cent under April a year ago according to statistics released by the Rubber Manufacturers Association today. Consumption for April 1936 was 52,031 long tons.

Curb Prices Sag; Trading Is Listless

New York, May 17 (AP).—Most active stocks in the curb market worked lower today during listless trading. The lack of business conformed with throttled activity on the big board and held most swings to small dimensions. Aluminum Co. of America backtracked 3½ points to 139½, Electric Bond & Share dropped ⅞ to 15⅝ and St. Regis Paper dipped ⅜ to 8⅜.

Moving in the other direction technicolor added 1⅞ at 25 on active demand influenced by Samuel Goldwyn's announcement he would make all future pictures in color. At one time this stock was up more than 2 points. Humble gained ⅝ to 78⅝ and Creole ⅛ to 32⅞. Turnover totaled 207,000 shares compared with 276,000 last Friday.

Workers' Brigade Gathers at Capital

By the Associated Press.

Approximately 50 members of the women's brigade of the Workers Alliance gathered on the Capitol steps yesterday to urge enactment of a bill to appropriate $3,000,000,000 for work relief in the next fiscal year.

They were greeted by half a dozen members of the House liberal bloc seeking to increase the relief appropriation substantially above the $1,500,000,000 requested by President Roosevelt.

Representative Allen (Democrat), Pennsylvania, told the group "these economies being preached today should never be realized at the expense of the unemployed.

The Workers Alliance is an organization composed, its sponsors say, of WPA workers who want higher relief pay.

AUBREY ST. C. WARDWELL, Attorney for Plaintiff; Woodward Bldg.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. District of Columbia to the use of Michael Altieri, 4529 Pimlico road, Baltimore, Md., plaintiff, vs. Del Balso Construction Corporation, 220 East Forty-second street, New York City, N. Y., and Maryland Casualty Company, 1417 K street northwest, Washington, D. C., defendants. Law No. 88858. Order. Upon consideration of the petition for an order of publication herein, and it appearing to the Court that this is a suit by the use plaintiff, who claims to have furnished labor, material and supplies, in connection with the contract for a public work in the District of Columbia, heretofore entered into between Del Balso Construction Corporation and the District of Columbia, dated, September 20th, 1935, and known as District of Columbia construction contract No. 12376, and that this is a suit on the bond given by Del Balso Construction Corporation as principal, and the Maryland Casualty Company, a body corporate, as surety, to the District of Columbia, guaranteeing the payment of all claims in accordance with the Act of Congress, July 7, 1932, 47 Statute 608, Chapter 441, and, it being represented to the Court that the use plaintiff has no knowledge or information of the existence of any other unpaid creditors who furnished labor, materials or supplies to the defendant, Del Balso Construction Corporation, in connection with its contract with the District of Columbia, dated September 20th, 1935, as aforesaid, and it further appearing that the final date of completion of the work under said contract is represented to be March 20, 1938, and that the final date of settlement to be May 8, 1936, it is by the Court this 28th day of April, 1937, ordered, that personal notice to creditors under the aforesaid Act of Congress be dispensed with, and, it is further ordered, that a notice be published in The Washington Post, Washington, D. C., a newspaper of general circulation, for the issues of May 4, May 11 and May 18, 1937; informing them in substantially the following form: "Pursuant to the requirements of an Act of Congress as amended July 7, 1932, 47 Statute 608, Chapter 441, notice is hereby given to all creditors of Del Balso Construction Corporation, under a contract between the District of Columbia and Del Balso Construction Corporation, for the construction of certain sewer work in the District of Columbia, at and near Nineteenth and C streets northeast, in the District of Columbia, known as 'The Northeast Boundary Sewer Replacement Job,' and being known as District of Columbia Construction Contract No. '12376; that the above action has been instituted on the bond of the defendant, Del Balso Construction Corporation, and its surety, on the bond for said work and that any creditor may file a claim in this action and be made a party to this cause as in said Act of Congress provided within the time limited by said act: Providing a copy of this order be published in The Washington Post, Washington, D. C., in the issues of May 4, May 11 and May 18, 1937. JAMES M. PROCTOR, Justice. A true copy. Test. (Seal.) CHARLES E. STEWART, Clerk. By ANDREW A. HORNER, Assistant Clerk. 4, 11, 18

By virtue of a decree of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia in Equity Cause No. 63618, the undersigned trustees will sell at public auction, subject to ratification by the court, at the front door of the Court House of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia on

AT THREE O'CLOCK P. M.

Lot number thirteen (13) in Edson Bradley's Combination of part of Square numbered one hundred and thirty-eight (138) as per plat recorded in the Office of the Surveyor for the District of Columbia in Liber 43 at folio 65, together with any and all buildings thereon and all other property so attached thereto as to constitute part of the realty, all in the District of Columbia. Said property is to be sold subject to the following liens and possible inchoate right of dower, namely:

(A) An existing deed of trust dated December 31, 1930, appearing for record in Liber 6520 at folio 457 of the Land Records of the District of Columbia in the office of the Recorder of Deeds, securing a certain promissory note of Joseph J. Moebs in the sum of $1,350,000.00 with interest at the rate of 5¾% per annum. (The Trustees are advised that maturity of this deed of trust has been extended to December 31, 1938, and is a present unpaid balance of $1,274,100.00, bearing interest at the rate of 5¼% per annum, payable monthly, and that principal payments of $4,200.00 a month, payable monthly, are required.)

(B) An existing deed of trust bearing date of January 7, 1931, appearing for record in Liber 6520 at folio 465 of the Land Records of the District of Columbia in the office of the Recorder of Deeds to secure the payment of certain notes dated April 11, 1928, made by Joseph J. Moebs in the aggregate principal amount of $400,000.00 payable on or before five (5) years after said date, with interest at the rate of 5½% per annum. (Said deed of trust contains a provision that the release thereof may be obtained upon the payment of $50,000.00, with respect to which prospective bidders are referred to the recorded instrument. The Trustees are advised that the deed of trust has matured and interest thereon at 4% per annum is overdue from October 11, 1936).

(C) Such inchoate right of dower as Bertha J. Moebs, the former wife of Joseph J. Moebs, had and may still retain in said property.

TERMS OF SALE—One-third of the purchase price to be paid in cash and the balance in two equal installments, payable in one and two years from date of sale and to be represented by the promissory notes of the purchaser, bearing interest at the rate of 6% per annum, payable semi-annually, and secured by deed of trust on the property sold, or all cash, at the option of the purchaser. The property is to be sold subject to the above encumbrances, interest thereon, said inchoate right of dower and taxes unpaid or accrued. A $5,000.00 deposit shall be required of the purchaser at the time of said sale.

TERMS APPLICABLE TO BOTH SALES—All conveyancing, notary fees, recording, revenue stamps and examination of title to be at the cost of purchaser. Terms of sale to be complied with within thirty (30) days from the approval and ratification thereof by the Court, otherwise the Trustees reserve the right to resell at the risk and cost of defaulting purchaser after five (5) days' notice by advertisement of the resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C.

$50 DOWN—4 acres, wooded land on good gravel road, 12½ miles D. C., $325. NAt. 3753. AT. 5205-J.

WE HAVE REFRAINED from making extraordinary statements about the beauty of Bannockburn Farm, which is being sold At Auction Thursday, May 20. Last Sunday an official of the Treasury Department castigated us for not advertising a true picture of the place. He said: "This place has more natural attractions than any I have seen within 25 miles of Washington." Looking in every direction, the charm is unsurpassed. It is situated within splendid commuting distance of Washington, in a delightful and exclusive estate environment, embodying ideal country-life conditions with exceptional accessibility and rural conveniences of living. You must see it to appreciate its lasting value. See Display Ad on the Financial Page of this paper or call N. C. Hines & Sons, Auctioneers. DIstrict 7740.

BROKERS ATTENTION

Please see Display advertisement on the financial page Bannockburn Farm, this paper. We agree to pay a commission of 2½% to the broker securing a purchaser for this estate at the auction sale. To be eligible for this commission the broker must notify us prior to the sale, in writing, of the name of the client he represents together with an acknowledgement on the client's part that the broker is his representative. We are always glad to protect brokers who comply with these conditions.

Brokers may also participate in commissions earned by us on contracts submitted by them, or from an auction which the broker assisted us in securing.
